Hearnes says probe difficult

CHARLESTON, Mo. AP--Warren E. Hearnes voluntary appearance last week before a federal grand jury in Kansas City constituted "the three most difficult days of my life," the former Missouri governor says.

With nearly 13 hours of testifying behind him, Hearnes said Monday he feels the investigation is over "as far as I'm concerned" and he hopes to turn now to his campaign for the U.S.Senate. He aspires for the seat held by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., whose term is up after 1976.

For three years the grand jury has been piloted by U.S. Atty. Bert C. Hurn on an investigation of banking procedures for state funds and political contributions during Hearnes' two administrations and, more recently, the former governor's personal finances.

The grand jury was recessed indefinitely at the completion of Hearnes' appearance last Friday. The U.S. attorney acknowledged recommending by telephone to the Justice Department in Washington that no indictments be issued relating to Hearnes' 1968 income tax returns. Hurn noted, however, that those tax returns were only part of the grand jury probe.

Hearnes, interviewed at his home here, said that "all of these wild things written in the newspapers-conspiracy, extortion and all of these ridicuous things-failed to materialize" from the grand jury investigation.

He added:

"I can't control the two St. Louis newspapers if they continue to vie with each other. Bank accounts in Switzerland. People in Charleston laugh at those things, but after a while it's no laughing matter. I just hope someday it stops and I can campaign on the issues."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, who have long been reporting on the investigation, had recent exclusive items to which Hearnes apparently referred.

The Globe-Democrat told of reports of a secret bank account in Switzerland by which Hearnes hid his income. The former acknowledged to the newspaper the grand jury had asked him about such an account. But Hearnes said, "I told them there are no secret accounts-none, none whatsoever."

He also denied a report by the Post-Dispatch he owned a $35,000 share in a New Mexico copper mine given to him by Gerald Lowther, a Springfield attorney and close friend of Hearnes.

Hearnes told The Associated Press he once received by mail a share "worth about 100 bucks" in Commonwealth Mining, but did not keep it.

Suit filed against sheriff

CHARLESTON--A second suit, charging a Mississippi County office holder with nepotism has been filed in Circuit Court by Prosecuting Attorney Edward C. Graham.

Filed April 11 by Graham at the request of Lindsay Hurley of Charleston Route One, associate Judge of the County Court from the first district, the suit charges Sheriff W.J. "Pedro" Simmons with violating the nepotism section of the Missouri State Constitution and thereby

Charleston students stage sit-in

CHARLESTON--About 130 students staged a sit-in at the high school and refused to go to classes when school began at 8:20 a.m. today, according to Supt. Charles Rorex.

The sit-in reportedly is in protest to the board of education's failure to renew a contract for Mrs. Caroline Cole, an English instructor who has taught in the school system for five years. Mrs. Cole's contract was not renewed at the April 9 meeting of the board.

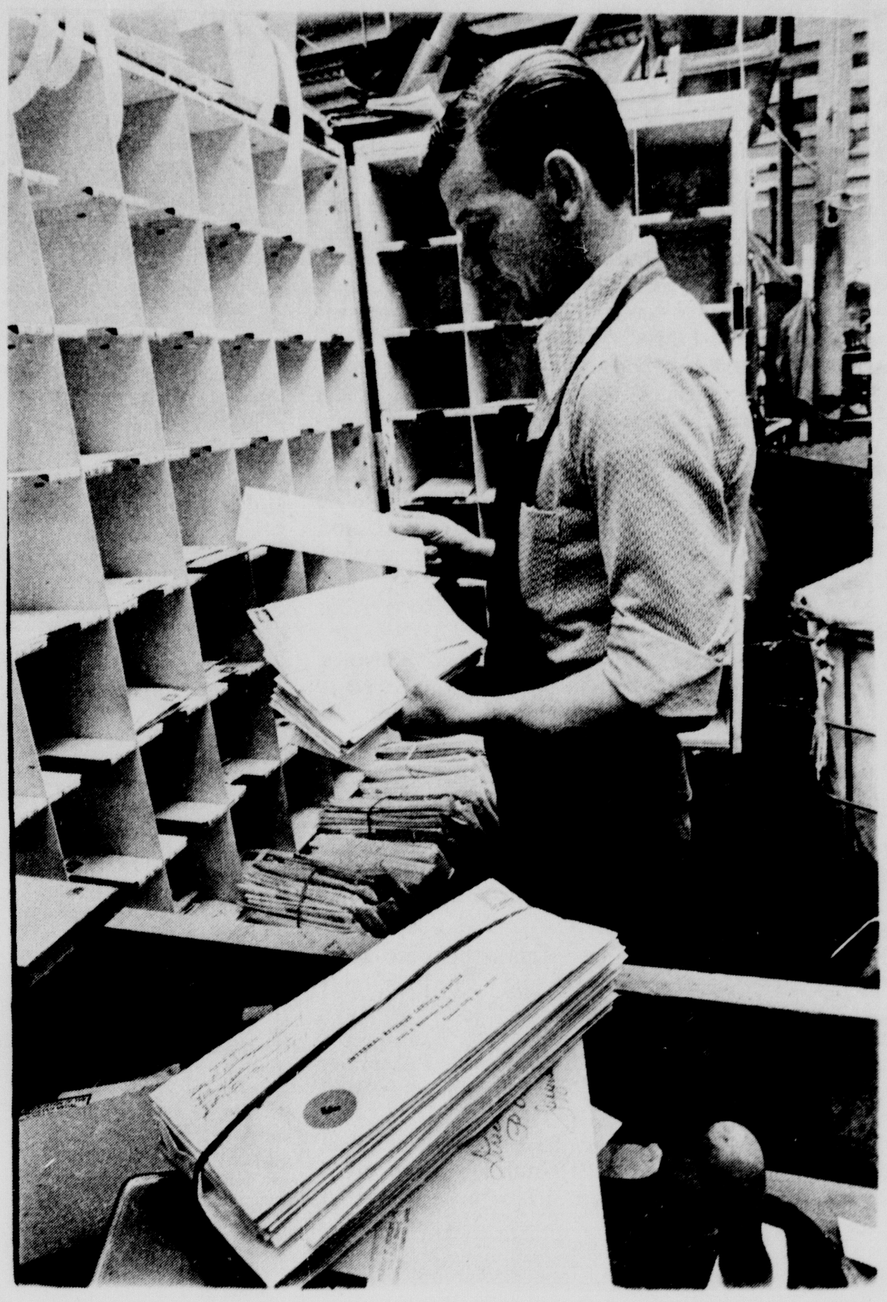

The students, all blacks, staged their protest in the common area, and while there was some chanting of "We shall overcome," there was no major disturbances, Rorex said, and most classes continued as normal. There are approximately 700 enrolled in the high school.

Rorex said 12 students met Monday afternoon with him and administrators of the high school to voice their objections of the dismissal of Mrs. Cole, who is also a black.

Lawrence Mays, a senior, has been the spokesman for the group which has asked for a meeting with the board.

Rorex said a meeting will be scheduled as soon as members of the board, some of whom are out of town, have been contacted.

There was no violence at the school this morning, however, police officers and members of the sheriff's department were called to the school as a precautionary measue.

The tax rush is on

Today is the final day to file federal and state income tax forms, and the Sikeston post office is gearing up for a last-minute rush tonight. Bill Headlee, a clerk, is shown busily working early today to sort through bundles deposited over-night with income tax forms inside. Tax forms mailed by midnight will be canceled with an April 15 postmark. Normally, mail must be deposited before 9:45 p.m. to receive that day's postmark.

Council approves sale of $1.9 million in bonds

The City Council Monday night approved the sale of $1.9 million in bonds for Triangle Industries to George K. Baum & Co., Inc.

The council also approved a proposal for an industrial park and housing improvement program to be funded by a community development grant.

The council authorized the city to take bids on new and smaller police cars and approved a revision in the city's trespassing code.

TRIANGLE BONDS

Last Thursday, $1.9 million worth of general obligation and industrial revenue bonds approved by voters for the Triangle Industries plant went on sale.

The bonds had been sold in a private sale, catching city officials, who assumed the bonds would be sold by public bid, by surprise.

At least two banks and one local broker had put together bids on the general obligation bonds in expectation of public bids.

Dick Hurlbut, a representative of Triangle Industries, apologized to the council for the lack of communication between the council and the company. He said Baum & Co. had been approached to buy the bonds in October, before the company announced it would open the Sikeston plant.

He said Triangle was never approached by anyone asking if the bonds would be open for public bidding.

He pointed out that Russell

Ambulance drivers threatened

BLOOMFIELD — Drivers for the Stoddard and Perry County Ambulance Services have been threatened with arrest and prosecution by Cape Girardeau County Prosecuting Attorney A. J. Seier, it was reported at Monday night's meeting of the Stoddard County Ambulance District board of trustees.

In a letter to Jack Smarr, chairman of the Stoddard County board, Seier stated that it had been brought to his attention that nonlicensed ambulances and drivers have been coming into Cape Girardeau and operating within that county.

"So that there will be no misunderstanding about what this office will do," Seier said, "be advised that upon the next report and verification of a violation by your two companies, warrants will be issued and prosecution begun."

The Stoddard County ambulance drivers have completed an 81-hour emergency medical training course at Three Rivers Community College in Poplar Bluff and are scheduled to receive licenses certificates on May 4.

Members of the Stoddard County ambulance district board said the charges probably stemmed from a complaint issued by George K. Rouse, who operates Cape County Private Ambulance Service Inc., a privately owned firm subsidized by the county.

One example of an emergency trip to Cape Girardeau occurred Saturday when a Stoddard County ambulance was dispatched to Painton, where Dr. John T. Crowe of Cape Girardeau and his 23-year-old son, Paul David Crowe, were injured in a plane crash. Both victims were taken to the Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Ramsey named chief

Acting Fire Chief L.D. Ramsey has been named fire chief, effective today, according to City Manager Charles Church.

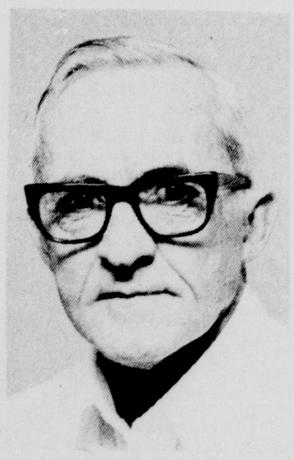

Ramsey, 51, was appointed acting chief Dec. 1, 1974, following the resignation of Larry Linnemeyer. Ramsey has 23 years of experience with the Sikeston Fire Department, including 15 previously as chief.

He resigned in 1969 and accepted a position with W.S. McMullin Construction Co.

Church said Ramsey has demonstrated his ablity to provide effective leadership for the department.

The new chief is expected to continue the fire prevention and inspection programs started while Linnemeyer was chief.

The city had received 57 applications for the position since Linnemeyer's resignation. Four applicants were interviewed.

Engineers acknowledge navigational study request

BENTON--The Southeast Missouri Regional Port Authority board of commissioners was told Monday that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has acknowledged receiving a request for a navigational feasibility study, but that no official decision has been made.

C.W. Rushing of Cape Girardeau, chairman of the board, said he had talked with Emmet Hahn of St. Louis, an engineer with the corps, who gave him the information. The board plans to call a special meeting within the next two weeks to discuss the project with Hahn.

At its March meeting, the board authorized A.J. Seier of Cape Girardeau, secretary of the board, to request that the Corps of engineers make a navigational feasibility study of a 12.5-mile stretch of land along the Mississippi River in Scott and Cape Girardeau counties.

The area to be studied starts about four miles south of the Scott-Cape Girardeau county line and ends about eight miles north of the line on the Missouri side of the river. The commissioners are particularly interested in the diversion channel located almost on the line dividing the two counties.

The commissioners recently toured the proposed area of study by boat. During a discussion of the trip Monday, tey agreed that the channel is the most likely and most desirable location for a port to be established to serve the two counties.

Tentative plans call for the commissions to survey the area by airplane soon.

If the Corps of Engineers approves the study, the first $1 million will be supplied by the government and would include planning and construction. Any expenses over this would have to be met by the sponsoring agency.

The board plans to seek congressional backing as one method of financing the project, as well as requesting the corps to make the study.

Seier was authorized to have official stationery printed for port authority business.

P'ville youth burned in fire

HAYTI--David Mullins, 12-year-old so son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mullins of Portageville Route Two, remained in critical condition today in St. John's Mercy Hospital Burn Center in St. Louis, from burns over 70 per cent of his body, according to J.C. Brown, executive director of Pemiscot Medical Center.

The boy was burned in a fire that destroyed the family home after a furnace exploded at 3:30 p.m. Monday. The boys parents brought him to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital, where he was given medical treatment of saline packs, intravenous solution and pain medication.

The St. John's Burn Center was alerted and a plane and pilot were provided by Baxter Southern, formerly of Caruthersville, owner of Southern Towing Co. in Memphis, Tenn., to fly the victim to St. Louis.

Brown highly praised Southern today for providing transportation and for St. John's acceptance of the boy without question. He further stated that this was an excellent example of private business and the medical center cooperating to provide the best possible medical care under difficult conditions.

Young Mullins arrived at the the St. Louis hospital at 6:35 p.m. Monday.

Effort to keep factory open fails

New efforts by representatives of the Sikeston Industrial Development Corporation and Chamber of Commerce today failed to keep the International Shoe Company from closing. The plant has announced plans to start phasing out its operation on April 30.

Galen Kruger, SIDC president; Allen Blanton, Chamber of Commerce president; and Sikeston attorney Robert A. Dempster flew to St. Louis this morning to meet with Rolf G. deLeuw, the company's general counsel.

Blanton said the three men hoped to explore every avenue to convince the company officials to leave the Sikeston factory open.

deLeuw said a new one-story building and reduced labor costs would not help enough to keep the plant open. He said the company is not receiving enough orders for shoes, noting that foreign imports have cornered 40 per cent of the shoe market in the United States.

When asked if the company would keep the plant open or reopen it at a later date if the economy picked up, deLeuw said the possibility was not out of the question, but he did not want to create any false hope. He said other International Shoe Co. plants are not producing to their capacity and they could

CRIMINAL'S VIEW OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

The matter of capital punishment is widely discussed today. Several states have already passed laws to reinstate the death penalty for specified types of murder, and more are expected to follow suit this year. However, although we have heard the opinions of law enforcement officials, sociologists, penologists, clergymen and many others, almost no one has bothered to ask the one individual who is most directly affected by capital punishment laws, to wit, the man who has committed murder.

One writer who did so, however, was a reporter for the National Enquirer, and the story appeared in that paper on February 18.

The man who was interviewed was Carl J. Isaacs, 21. Isaacs claims to have killed 15 people and was convicted of 6 murders. He is eligible for parole in 42 years. And what does he think of capital punishment? This is what he told the reporter:

"I believe in the death penalty to prevent people like me from killing."

Asked to explain, he said: "The death penalty always used to deter me because I knew I could die for murder. I'd walk into a place to stick ut up and I'd think twice about blowing that man away.

"But when you know you won't fry and the worst you can get is life, and maybe parole later — why not get rid of the evidence? That's what I did.

"There's too much killing ... and the only way to stop it is to bring back the death penalty. As long as killers know all they'll get is life, they'll keep right on killing — and that includes me."

Isaacs found bitter humor in his experience with some of the Law people, such as a judge who let him off for an earlier offense. "The Judge said: 'Give me your word you'll go straight and I'll set you free.'

"Imagine that!" Isaacs sneered. "So I said, 'I promise, your Honor,' and the Judge smiled, and I thought: 'You dumb old (expletive deleted).'"

While some of the "experts" have said that capital punishment is "not a deterrent" to murder, maybe we'd better listen to the opinioins of a few more convicted murderers.

According to The Wichita Eagle, the National Small Business Association has come up with a suggestion that, at first glance, looks sensible:

Let Congress enact legislation permitting small businesses to take tax credits in return for hiring up to two new employes.

It could generate up to a million jobs, the NSBA argues, and since the jobs would be in business, rather than in temporary governemnt ..."make work" programs, the jobs could easily become permanent ones as the economy improves.

The theory is that this kind of assistance to small business would help the economy improve and provide jobs for those unemployed at this time.

The suggestion is that participating business be allowed tax credits of up to 50 per cent of the cost of the new employes. This would permit the hiring of some capable people at an attractive pay scale, while training on the job.

Even though the Mo-Kan area has fared better than many areas of the country, we believe such a plan would be useful here, too, because some of our citizens who have been commuting to work in Kansas City have lost their jobs due to cutbacks in auto assembly plants, etc.

If the NSBA "job creation credit" plan -- one of six tax-related proposals made to the Senate Finance Committee recently - can create work opportunities, we think it's a good idea, too.

AUTOMATING THE CHECKOUT COUNTER

Food shoppers in many parts of the country are noticing more and more packages and cans with vertical lines of varying lengths on the label.

The lines, called the Universal Produce Code (UPC), are a marking system that identifies each product with a sort of social security number.

The UPC is one of the first steps toward a fully automated checkout system in supermarkets. In a store that uses UPC, an electronic scanner at the checkout counter reads the lines and feeds the information into a computer. The computer in turn spits out a sales slip on which is printed not only the price but the name and quantity of the item, the name and address of the store, the checkout lane, the date, the sales tax and the amount of change due.

It's estimated that by the end of 1975, 75 to 80 per cent of food manufacturing firms will have the UPC on their products, and that by 1980 most stores big enough to afford the expensive equipment will use the computerized system.

Consumers may benefit in several ways, says Beverly Henderson, consumer economics specialist at the University of Wisconsin-Extension.

They'll get through the checkout lines more quickly and prices should be more accurate and incorrect ring'ups eliminated. Calculations involving trading stamps, food stamps, coupons and refunds will be automatically handled and listed on the sales slip.

For the retailer, eliminating price markings will reduce labor overhead. But this may make it difficult for consumers to compare prices, she says.

If marking prices on individual items is stopped, shoppers will have to rely on shelf tags. Also, there is the question whether any savings that result from the new system will be passed on to consumers. Or will they be paying even higher prices at the supermarket because of the high cost of the equipment?

ECONOMIC NITRO-GLYCERIN

Mr. Alfred L. Malabre, Jr., editor of The all Street Journal weekly feature "Global Report," believes the time is appropriate for a look at what can lie at the end of a classic inflationary spiral. He writes of "The Awful Year Inflation Ran Wild" in Germany after World War I. "Even in today's economic environment," he reports, "the raw statistics of Germany's inflation make awesome reading. In August 1922, the contry's money supply totaled 252 billion marks. In January 1923,it was 2 trillion. In September 1932, it stood at 28 quadrillio. And in November 1923, it reached 497 quintillion--that is, 497 followed by 18 zeroes. This runaway inflation of the money supply stopped, finally, when the currency became virtually worthless. The old mark was replaced in 1924 by a new 'Reichsmark' whose value was set at 1 billion old marks. The old marks were withdrawn from circulation and ceased to be legal tender. In 1913, some 19 billion marks were on deposit in saving banks. In November 1924, that sum had the purchasing power of one quarter of an American penny . The story was much the same in the insurance business. The postage stamp on an envelope containing an insurance payment to a beneficiary often cost more than the sum written on the enclosed check."

Theorists and dreamers who think that a "little inflation" is a good thing for the United States are playing with worse than fire. They are tampering with economic nitroglycerin.

How few there are who have courage enough to admit their faults or resolution enough to mend them!

An educated man is not one whose memory is trained to carry a few dates in history-he is one who can accomplish things. A man who cannot think is not an educated man, however many college degrees he may have acquired. Thinking is the hardest work anyone can do- which is probably the reason why we have so few thinkers. There are two extremes to be avoided: one is the attitude of contept toward education, the other is the tragic snobbery of assuming that marching through an educational system is a sure cure for ignorance and mediocrity.

You cannot learn in any school what the world is going to do next year, but you can learn some of the things which the world has tried to do in former years, and where it failed and where it succeeded. If education consisted in warning the young student away from some of the false theories on which men have tried to build, so that he may be saved the loss of time in finding out by bitter experience, its good would be unquestioned. BEING HEARD

Government in America is being tested today.

Some say they don't like the directions it is taking.

Others say government leaders pay no attention to wishes of the people.

Undoubtedly, such governments exist within the 50 states.

And there is probably none which couldn't be improved.

But we believe there has never been a time in the history of the world when the individual had a better chance of being heard and heeded.

XXX

What's going on in Clinton is but one example, Government here, before any major move, either holds specific public meetings on the question at hand or announces the proposal will come before the city council, or a committee of the council, and date and time and place is given.

Federally-financed programs, such as the community redevelopment project for north Clinton, require public hearings as part of the qualification for funding. One of these will be at 7 o'clock tonight at the Clinton City Hall Council Chambers.

The Sunshine Law, sponsored by Senator William J. Cason, D-Clinton, requires not only that meetings at all levels of government be open but the practice be given of those meetings.

XXX

So let's think this over. If all of these opportunities are here for public participation in government, you'd think the meeting halls would be jammed, wouldn't you? Particularly if people are as unhappy with government as many claim to be.

You'd think the polls would be flooded on election day.

XXX

But what actually happens?

Most public hearings are attended by a handful of people.

Most elections, even the recent city election which had a much better voter turnout than normally, saw less than 50 percent of Clinton's citizens elect a council and decide on a sewer use charge.

Many conclusions may be drawn.

NAM SUPPORTS TAX CUTS, CONTINUED IN-FLATION FIGHT

President Ford's appeal for fiscal restraint received strong support from the National Association of Manufacturers, but the business group emphasized that in no case should government turn to wage and price controls.

In a statement following the President's State of the Union address, NAM Chairman David B. Meeker said Mr. Ford's recommendation of a cut in the corporate tax rate to 42 per cent "is one of the most effective steps that can possibly be taken toward providing the capital formation necessary for future jobs and production."

But he cautioned that a return to wage and price control "would endanger economic growth and job opportunities."

E.D. Kenna, NAM president, emphasized similar sentiments in a Mississippi speech. He noted that in the new heavily-democratic Congress there is strong pressure to increase federal spending to restimulate the economy, and warned:

"In the absence of fiscal and monetary restraint, industry is not going to support a big step backward to an unworking system of wage, price and credit controls."

Mr. Kenna rejected government allocation of credit as a solution to money scarcity for housing, small business and the state-local sector of the economy, and suggested instead that more credit funs can be made available by stemming the growth of federal agency financing. He noted that this 1945 to $91.6 in 1974 and has become a major taker of funds at a time of great capital shortage.

The Association's Economic Stabilization Committee, made up of executives of member companies, met in Washington to hear and analyze Mr. Ford's address. They too praised his positive proposals and stressed that industry must "aggressively" oppose controls.

In his statement, Mr. Meeker, president and chief ececutive officer, Hobert Corporation, said that, although the NAM has serious reservations regarding any action that will result in increased federal deficits, the Association does endorse President Ford's choice of a tax reduction rather than increased government spending in his program to stimulate the economy.

Mr. Meeker also said an increase in the investment tax credit rate to 12 percent is potentially a constructive action, but that a one-year limit will not provide adequate time for expansion in most industries.

And in a speech to the Montgomery County, Ky., Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Meeker said Mr. Ford's tax cut proposal offers hope of quickly stimulating consumer purchases which should help some depressed industries. "Hopefully, a tax reduction also will ease union pressure for wage increases," he said.

Mr. Meeker warned that "inflation remains public enemy No. 1 and any temporary stiumlation of business activity must not divert our attention from the need to bring inflation firmly under control."

An IRS Fantasy
By Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON--Every year around tax time I have a fantasy about the IRS. Last year my fantasy was that I made a gross error in favor of the government and had overpaid my taxes by such a large sum that I received a personal visit from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue who handed me a briefcase filled with new $100) bills.

In my dream the Commissioner told me, "You are a great American and I wish we had more like you. Take this small token of our appreciation plus 6 per cent interest." (He handed me another package of bills.)

I recall that I protested, saying that the government needed the funds more than I did. But the Commissioner was adamant. "We checked your return carefully and we could not in good conscience accept all the money you paid in taxes. You refused to take any deductions for business or entertainment or even for your family. My people were so impressed by your honesty as well as the neatness of your tax form that they called it to my personal attention. Not only am I authorized to present you with these funds but I am also awarding you the IRS Medal of Honor with an Oak Leaf Cluster--the highest decoration the Service can award."

He kissed me on both cheeks.

This year my fantasy is far more interesting. After reading that the IRS had used undercover women informers to investigate the sex habits of those suspected of cheating on their taxes, I worked out the following scenario.

I send an anonymous letter to the IRS saying:"Buchwald has a secret numbered bank account in Switzerland and sends a courier over to Geneva every month with a suitcase full of cash. A full investigation of his activities might produce astounding results.

"P.S. He is partial to blondes and is a leg man."

The IRS Counterintelligence Organazation calls a special meeting. The Chief tells his agents, "We must get the number of that Swiss account. Wiretaps and surveillance have been unproductive. We have no choice but to put 'Operation Joy of Sex' into action."

Everyone at the table whistles, . "He's very clever," the Chief's Deputy says. "We can't put any woman informer on to him. It's got to be someone special."

"Wht about Sherry Foldout?"

"You mean Burning Lips, the Passion Flower of Pasadena?"

"We'll haveto give her 30 per cent of the fine, but it will be worth it. When you're trying to catch a rat in a tax shelter you have to use the most expensive cheese in the store."

They call in Sherry and tell her, "We don't care what it takes. Stay with him day and night, but get that number."

I won't go into all the details of the rest of the fantasy except to say that Sherry Foldout goes way beyond the call of duty to get my secret out of me. But there is one thing the IRS hasn't counted on.

With the statute of limitations on my tax return almost up, Sherry tearfully confesses to her superiors, "I don't know how to tell you this, but I've fallen in love with him. It's the first time in my life I've ever felt anything for a tax evader. Why didn't you warn me about this? I'll never be the same again."

The IRS Counterintelligence Organizaton calls another special meeting. The Chief says, "Sherry's been compromised. We'll have to use Fern La Long and tell Astrid Rapture to stand by just in case he does to Fern what he did to Sherry."

"We've never used three undercover women on one case before," the Deputy protests.

"You forget, Desmond," the Chief says angrly. "We're not dealing with an ordinary tax cheater. We'll get him if we have to use every woman in the Service."

I haven't told my wife about my latest IRS fantasy because she doesn't understand anything about taxes, and if I told her she'd only become confused.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Jackie Spent So Much Even Onassis Winced
By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--History will not likely forget Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the tragic first lady of the 1960s and jet set queen of the 1970s, who is certainly one of the world's most fascinating women.

To learn more about the women behind the beauty and grace, we have broken through the aura of aloofness and remoteness she created about herself. We have spoken to intimates who previously had been silent. We have had access to some of her personal papers.

Jacqueine Onassis' favorite insignia is the dollar sign. She had exquisite but expensive tastes.

Both of her late husbands, John F. Kennedy and Aristotle S. Onassis, were millionaires who could afford to indulge the lovely Jackie. But according to intimates, both complained bitterly about her extravagance.

These intimates describe her as a "compulsive shopper" who lavished money on clothes, jewelry, art, antiques and other objects that catch her eye.

Her prodigal spending , say our sources, caused more than one quarrel over money during her marriage to Kennedy. May Gallagher, who kept the First Family's personal accounts, reports that Jackie spent $105,446.14 during her first year in the White House.

Of this, more than $40,000 went for clothes. There was one bill alone for $4,000 from Givenchy of Paris. She spent the rest for food, liquor, jewelry, art, beauty treatments and the like. Incidentally, she paid only for private entertaining out of her account. All the bills for official soirees were picked up by the government.

Yet the President's complaints, apparently, made little impression on her. For the following year, she ran up $121,461.61 in expenses. She was spending , in other words,more than the President's $100,000 salary.

When Jackie married Aristotle Anassis, she drew a $30,000 monthly allowance and was permitted to charge purchases at fashionable stores. She quickly bgan running up shopping bills that were startling even by the shipping tycoon's expansive standards.

Ari complained to intimates that he got one $5,000 bill for messenger service and another $6,000 bill for the care and feeding of Jackie's pets. Speaking for Jackie, aid Nancy Tuckerman called these bills "unrealistic." But she was unwilling to discuss Jackie's finances with us.

Jackie also hired the celebrated decorator, Billy Bladwin, to rearrange the furnishings aboard the yacht Christina and their house on the Greek island of Skorpios. Baldwin took one look inside the yacht and pronouced it "the epitome of vulgarity and bad taste."

But Onassis, according to his associates, was a fastidious man who didn't like someone changing things around. He wouldn't permit Baldwin to touch the yacht but agreed to let him redecorate the Skorpios house.

When Ari discovered that Baldwin had installed two handsome but useless TV sets in the house, the old tycoon was so furious he refused to pay the last bill, our sources say. Apparently, the island not only has no TVreception but the sets were shipped to Greece on a rival airline. Onassis owned Olympic Airways.

Baldwin angrily denied the anecdote. "There's absolutely not a word of truth in it," he told us. But we have had access to the records, which show that Baldwin billed Onassis for $43,855.74. A payment of $27,609.89 was made on Nov . 28, 1968, followed by a second $10,000 payment on Feb. 10, 1969. But Onassis, according to our sources, refused to pay the $6,245.85 balance.

The biggest bill Jackie tried to pawn off on her husband was for $400,000 in legal expenses over a lawsuit involving freelance photographer Ronald Galella. She wrote warm notes to her attorney, Judge Simon Rifkind, during the litigation. A friend, to whom she showed the letters, recalls such lines as this one: "I am so glad that chivalry is not dead."

But when Rifkind submitted his bill, it went unpaid. Onassis was furious over the high charges. Associates say he put up $50,000 and told Jackie to pay the rest. But when the law firm sued, he relented and arranged a $235,000 settlement. He deposited the money in her account, and an hour later she wrote out a check. Rifkind declined comment.

Eventually, Onassis got fed up with Jackie's spending and transferred her account to his Monte Carlo office where he could keep a closer watch on it. Our sources say he reduced her allowance to $20,000 a month and cracked down on her charge accounts.

On at least one occasion, Jackie charged one of her shopping sprees to her host. The Onassises were invited to Iran in 1972 as guests of Iran's top oilman, Reza Fallah, and his daughter, Lilly.

Not only did the Onassis entourage run up a huge hotel bll, including several long-distance calls, but Jackie loaded up on expensive gifts. They left all the bills for Fallah to pay. He even paid for a fancy Persian rug, which a belly dancer gave to Ari during her night club act. Jackie also hinted that she would like to take home some golden caviar, which was delivered in great quantity to her hotel.

Commenting on this report, Nancy Tuckerman told us that Jackie just bought a jacket for her son John, nothing more. But we have seen evidence that she purchased several sheepskin jackets, sheepskin boots necklaces, earrings, gold bracelets, antiques and a brass trunk for storing the jewelry. She bought so much jewelry in fact, that the jeweler gave her a valuable gift on the house.

Neither Fallah nor his daughter could be reached for comment in Iran.

In the next report, we'll tell how Jackie saved money.

CRIMINAL'S VIEW OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

The matter of capital punishment is widely discussed today. Several states have already passed laws to reinstate the death penalty for specified types of murder, and more are expected to follow suit this year. However, although we have heard the opinions of law enforcement officials, sociologists, penologists, clergymen and many others, almost no one has bothered to ask the one individual who is most directly affected by capital punishment laws, to wit, the man who has committed murder.

One writer who did so, however, was a reporter for the National Enquirer, and the story appeared in that paper on February 18.

The man who was interviewed was Carl J. Isaacs, 21. Isaacs claims to have killed 15 people and was convicted of 6 murders. He is eligible for parole in 42 years. And what does he think of capital punishment? This is what he told the reporter:

"I believe in the death penalty to prevent people like me from killing."

Asked to explain, he said: "The death penalty always used to deter me because I knew I could die for murder. I'd walk into a place to stick ut up and I'd think twice about blowing that man away.

"But when you know you won't fry and the worst you can get is life, and maybe parole later — why not get rid of the evidence? That's what I did.

"There's too much killing ... and the only way to stop it is to bring back the death penalty. As long as killers know all they'll get is life, they'll keep right on killing — and that includes me."

Isaacs found bitter humor in his experience with some of the Law people, such as a judge who let him off for an earlier offense. "The Judge said: 'Give me your word you'll go straight and I'll set you free.'

"Imagine that!" Isaacs sneered. "So I said, 'I promise, your Honor,' and the Judge smiled, and I thought: 'You dumb old (expletive deleted).'"

While some of the "experts" have said that capital punishment is "not a deterrent" to murder, maybe we'd better listen to the opinioins of a few more convicted murderers.

According to The Wichita Eagle, the National Small Business Association has come up with a suggestion that, at first glance, looks sensible:

Let Congress enact legislation permitting small businesses to take tax credits in return for hiring up to two new employes.

It could generate up to a million jobs, the NSBA argues, and since the jobs would be in business, rather than in temporary governemnt . "make work" programs, the jobs could easily become permanent ones as the economy improves.

The theory is that this kind of assistance to small business would help the economy improve and provide jobs for those unemployed at this time.

The suggestion is that participating business be allowed tax credits of up to 50 per cent of the cost of the new employes. This would permit the hiring of some capable people at an attractive pay scale, while training on the job.

Even though the Mo-Kan area has fared better than many areas of the country, we believe such a plan would be useful here, too, because some of our citizens who have been commuting to work in Kansas City have lost their jobs due to cutbacks in auto assembly plants, etc.

If the NSBA "job creation credit" plan -- one of six tax-related proposals made to the Senate Finance Committee recently - can create work opportunities, we think it's a good idea, too.

AUTOMATING THE CHECKOUT COUNTER

Food shoppers in many parts of the country are noticing more and more packages and cans with vertical lines of varying lengths on the label.

The lines, called the Universal Produce Code (UPC), are a marking system that identifies each product with a sort of social security number.

The UPC is one of the first steps toward a fully automated checkout system in supermarkets. In a store that uses UPC, an electronic scanner at the checkout counter reads the lines and feeds the information into a computer. The computer in turn spits out a sales slip on which is printed not only the price but the name and quantity of the item, the name and address of the store, the checkout lane, the date, the sales tax and the amount of change due.

It's estimated that by the end of 1975, 75 to 80 per cent of food manufacturing firms will have the UPC on their products, and that by 1980 most stores big enough to afford the expensive equipment will use the computerized system.

Consumers may benefit in several ways, says Beverly Henderson, consumer economics specialist at the University of Wisconsin-Extension.

They'll get through the checkout lines more quickly and prices should be more accurate and incorrect ring'ups eliminated. Calculations involving trading stamps, food stamps, coupons and refunds will be automatically handled and listed on the sales slip.

For the retailer, eliminating price markings will reduce labor overhead. But this may make it difficult for consumers to compare prices, she says.

If marking prices on individual items is stopped, shoppers will have to rely on shelf tags. Also, there is the question whether any savings that result from the new system will be passed on to consumers. Or will they be paying even higher prices at the supermarket because of the high cost of the equipment?

An educated man is not one whose memory is trained to carry a few dates in history-he is one who can accomplish things. A man who cannot think is not an educated man, however many college degrees he may have acquired. Thinking is the hardest work anyone can do- which is probably the reason why we have so few thinkers. There are two extremes to be avoided: one is the attitude of contept toward education, the other is the tragic snobbery of assuming that marching through an educational system is a sure cure for ignorance and mediocrity.

You cannot learn in any school what the world is going to do next year, but you can learn some of the things which the world has tried to do in former years, and where it failed and where it succeeded. If education consisted in warning the young student away from some of the false theories on which men have tried to build, so that he may be saved the loss of time in finding out by bitter experience, its good would be unquestioned. Abraham Lincoln was noted for his pungent and appropriate wit. The Great Emancipator was resting with his campaign manager in a hotel lobby. As usual the village cut-ups congregated there, and one, bolder than the rest, remarked, "Mr. Lincoln, your speech was good, but there were some points in it that are quite beyond my reach."

The simple Lincoln looked up and chuckled: "Then I am sorry for you. I once had a dog that had the same trouble with fleas."

BEING HEARD

Government in America is being tested today.

Some say they don't like the directions it is taking.

Others say government leaders pay no attention to wishes of the people.

Undoubtedly, such governments exist within the 50 states.

And there is probably none which couldn't be improved.

But we believe there has never been a time in the history of the world when the individual had a better chance of being heard and heeded.

XXX

What's going on in Clinton is but one example, Government here, before any major move, either holds specific public meetings on the question at hand or announces the proposal will come before the city council, or a committee of the council, and date and time and place is given.

Federally-financed programs, such as the community redevelopment project for north Clinton, require public hearings as part of the qualification for funding. One of these will be at 7 o'clock tonight at the Clinton City Hall Council Chambers.

The Sunshine Law, sponsored by Senator William J. Cason, D-Clinton, requires not only that meetings at all levels of government be open but the practice be given of those meetings.

XXX

So let's think this over. If all of these opportunities are here for public participation in government, you'd think the meeting halls would be jammed, wouldn't you? Particularly if people are as unhappy with government as many claim to be.

You'd think the polls would be flooded on election day.

XXX

But what actually happens?

Most public hearings are attended by a handful of people.

Most elections, even the recent city election which had a much better voter turnout than normally, saw less than 50 percent of Clinton's citizens elect a council and decide on a sewer use charge.

Many conclusions may be drawn.

NAM SUPPORTS TAX CUTS, CONTINUED IN-FLATION FIGHT

President Ford's appeal for fiscal restraint received strong support from the National Association of Manufacturers, but the business group emphasized that in no case should government turn to wage and price controls.

In a statement following the President's State of the Union address, NAM Chairman David B. Meeker said Mr. Ford's recommendation of a cut in the corporate tax rate to 42 per cent "is one of the most effective steps that can possibly be taken toward providing the capital formation necessary for future jobs and production."

But he cautioned that a return to wage and price control "would endanger economic growth and job opportunities."

E.D. Kenna, NAM president, emphasized similar sentiments in a Mississippi speech. He noted that in the new heavily-democratic Congress there is strong pressure to increase federal spending to restimulate the economy, and warned:

"In the absence of fiscal and monetary restraint, industry is not going to support a big step backward to an unworking system of wage, price and credit controls."

Mr. Kenna rejected government allocation of credit as a solution to money scarcity for housing, small business and the state-local sector of the economy, and suggested instead that more credit funs can be made available by stemming the growth of federal agency financing. He noted that this 1945 to $91.6 in 1974 and has become a major taker of funds at a time of great capital shortage.

The Association's Economic Stabilization Committee, made up of executives of member companies, met in Washington to hear and analyze Mr. Ford's address. They too praised his positive proposals and stressed that industry must "aggressively" oppose controls.

In his statement, Mr. Meeker, president and chief ececutive officer, Hobert Corporation, said that, although the NAM has serious reservations regarding any action that will result in increased federal deficits, the Association does endorse President Ford's choice of a tax reduction rather than increased government spending in his program to stimulate the economy.

Mr. Meeker also said an increase in the investment tax credit rate to 12 percent is potentially a constructive action, but that a one-year limit will not provide adequate time for expansion in most industries.

And in a speech to the Montgomery County, Ky., Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Meeker said Mr. Ford's tax cut proposal offers hope of quickly stimulating consumer purchases which should help some depressed industries. "Hopefully, a tax reduction also will ease union pressure for wage increases," he said.

Mr. Meeker warned that "inflation remains public enemy No. 1 and any temporary stiumlation of business activity must not divert our attention from the need to bring inflation firmly under control."

Art Buchwald

An IRS Fantasy
By Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON--Every year around tax time I have a fantasy about the IRS. Last year my fantasy was that I made a gross error in favor of the government and had overpaid my taxes by such a large sum that I received a personal visit from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue who handed me a briefcase filled with new $100) bills.

In my dream the Commissioner told me, "You are a great American and I wish we had more like you. Take this small token of our appreciation plus 6 per cent interest." (He handed me another package of bills.)

I recall that I protested, saying that the government needed the funds more than I did. But the Commissioner was adamant. "We checked your return carefully and we could not in good conscience accept all the money you paid in taxes. You refused to take any deductions for business or entertainment or even for your family. My people were so impressed by your honesty as well as the neatness of your tax form that they called it to my personal attention. Not only am I authorized to present you with these funds but I am also awarding you the IRS Medal of Honor with an Oak Leaf Cluster--the highest decoration the Service can award."

He kissed me on both cheeks.

This year my fantasy is far more interesting. After reading that the IRS had used undercover women informers to investigate the sex habits of those suspected of cheating on their taxes, I worked out the following scenario.

I send an anonymous letter to the IRS saying:"Buchwald has a secret numbered bank account in Switzerland and sends a courier over to Geneva every month with a suitcase full of cash. A full investigation of his activities might produce astounding results.

"P.S. He is partial to blondes and is a leg man."

The IRS Counterintelligence Organazation calls a special meeting. The Chief tells his agents, "We must get the number of that Swiss account. Wiretaps and surveillance have been unproductive. We have no choice but to put 'Operation Joy of Sex' into action."

Everyone at the table whistles, . "He's very clever," the Chief's Deputy says. "We can't put any woman informer on to him. It's got to be someone special."

"Wht about Sherry Foldout?"

"You mean Burning Lips, the Passion Flower of Pasadena?"

"We'll haveto give her 30 per cent of the fine, but it will be worth it. When you're trying to catch a rat in a tax shelter you have to use the most expensive cheese in the store."

They call in Sherry and tell her, "We don't care what it takes. Stay with him day and night, but get that number."

I won't go into all the details of the rest of the fantasy except to say that Sherry Foldout goes way beyond the call of duty to get my secret out of me. But there is one thing the IRS hasn't counted on.

With the statute of limitations on my tax return almost up, Sherry tearfully confesses to her superiors, "I don't know how to tell you this, but I've fallen in love with him. It's the first time in my life I've ever felt anything for a tax evader. Why didn't you warn me about this? I'll never be the same again."

The IRS Counterintelligence Organizaton calls another special meeting. The Chief says, "Sherry's been compromised. We'll have to use Fern La Long and tell Astrid Rapture to stand by just in case he does to Fern what he did to Sherry."

"We've never used three undercover women on one case before," the Deputy protests.

"You forget, Desmond," the Chief says angrly. "We're not dealing with an ordinary tax cheater. We'll get him if we have to use every woman in the Service."

I haven't told my wife about my latest IRS fantasy because she doesn't understand anything about taxes, and if I told her she'd only become confused.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Jackie Spent So Much Even Onassis Winced
By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--History will not likely forget Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the tragic first lady of the 1960s and jet set queen of the 1970s, who is certainly one of the world's most fascinating women.

To learn more about the women behind the beauty and grace, we have broken through the aura of aloofness and remoteness she created about herself. We have spoken to intimates who previously had been silent. We have had access to some of her personal papers.

Jacqueine Onassis' favorite insignia is the dollar sign. She had exquisite but expensive tastes.

Both of her late husbands, John F. Kennedy and Aristotle S. Onassis, were millionaires who could afford to indulge the lovely Jackie. But according to intimates, both complained bitterly about her extravagance.

These intimates describe her as a "compulsive shopper" who lavished money on clothes, jewelry, art, antiques and other objects that catch her eye.

Her prodigal spending , say our sources, caused more than one quarrel over money during her marriage to Kennedy. May Gallagher, who kept the First Family's personal accounts, reports that Jackie spent $105,446.14 during her first year in the White House.

Of this, more than $40,000 went for clothes. There was one bill alone for $4,000 from Givenchy of Paris. She spent the rest for food, liquor, jewelry, art, beauty treatments and the like. Incidentally, she paid only for private entertaining out of her account. All the bills for official soirees were picked up by the government.

Yet the President's complaints, apparently, made little impression on her. For the following year, she ran up $121,461.61 in expenses. She was spending , in other words,more than the President's $100,000 salary.

When Jackie married Aristotle Anassis, she drew a $30,000 monthly allowance and was permitted to charge purchases at fashionable stores. She quickly bgan running up shopping bills that were startling even by the shipping tycoon's expansive standards.

Ari complained to intimates that he got one $5,000 bill for messenger service and another $6,000 bill for the care and feeding of Jackie's pets. Speaking for Jackie, aid Nancy Tuckerman called these bills "unrealistic." But she was unwilling to discuss Jackie's finances with us.

Jackie also hired the celebrated decorator, Billy Bladwin, to rearrange the furnishings aboard the yacht Christina and their house on the Greek island of Skorpios. Baldwin took one look inside the yacht and pronouced it "the epitome of vulgarity and bad taste."

But Onassis, according to his associates, was a fastidious man who didn't like someone changing things around. He wouldn't permit Baldwin to touch the yacht but agreed to let him redecorate the Skorpios house.

When Ari discovered that Baldwin had installed two handsome but useless TV sets in the house, the old tycoon was so furious he refused to pay the last bill, our sources say. Apparently, the island not only has no TVreception but the sets were shipped to Greece on a rival airline. Onassis owned Olympic Airways.

Baldwin angrily denied the anecdote. "There's absolutely not a word of truth in it," he told us. But we have had access to the records, which show that Baldwin billed Onassis for $43,855.74. A payment of $27,609.89 was made on Nov . 28, 1968, followed by a second $10,000 payment on Feb. 10, 1969. But Onassis, according to our sources, refused to pay the $6,245.85 balance.

The biggest bill Jackie tried to pawn off on her husband was for $400,000 in legal expenses over a lawsuit involving freelance photographer Ronald Galella. She wrote warm notes to her attorney, Judge Simon Rifkind, during the litigation. A friend, to whom she showed the letters, recalls such lines as this one: "I am so glad that chivalry is not dead."

But when Rifkind submitted his bill, it went unpaid. Onassis was furious over the high charges. Associates say he put up $50,000 and told Jackie to pay the rest. But when the law firm sued, he relented and arranged a $235,000 settlement. He deposited the money in her account, and an hour later she wrote out a check. Rifkind declined comment.

Eventually, Onassis got fed up with Jackie's spending and transferred her account to his Monte Carlo office where he could keep a closer watch on it. Our sources say he reduced her allowance to $20,000 a month and cracked down on her charge accounts.

On at least one occasion, Jackie charged one of her shopping sprees to her host. The Onassises were invited to Iran in 1972 as guests of Iran's top oilman, Reza Fallah, and his daughter, Lilly.

Not only did the Onassis entourage run up a huge hotel bll, including several long-distance calls, but Jackie loaded up on expensive gifts. They left all the bills for Fallah to pay. He even paid for a fancy Persian rug, which a belly dancer gave to Ari during her night club act. Jackie also hinted that she would like to take home some golden caviar, which was delivered in great quantity to her hotel.

Commenting on this report, Nancy Tuckerman told us that Jackie just bought a jacket for her son John, nothing more. But we have seen evidence that she purchased several sheepskin jackets, sheepskin boots necklaces, earrings, gold bracelets, antiques and a brass trunk for storing the jewelry. She bought so much jewelry in fact, that the jeweler gave her a valuable gift on the house.

Neither Fallah nor his daughter could be reached for comment in Iran.

In the next report, we'll tell how Jackie saved money.

School tax election set in Oran

ORAN--A special election will be held May 6 in the Oran R-3 School District on a proposal to increase the school tax levy 40 cents per $100 valuation.

The decision to call the election was made by the board of education at a special meeting Thursday night. Board members say the district must raise more funds to operate the school or face the alternative of reducing services in areas other than instruction.

If the proposed increase is approved, the total tax levy for the district would become $3.60 per $100 valuation. Of the proposed 40-cent increase, 10 cents would go into the teachers fund and 30 cents into the incidental fund. A two-thirds majority is required for the measure to pass.

The proposal was rejected in the April 1 school election.

Court to accept bids from banks

BENTON — The Scott County Court announced Monday that bids may be submitted until noon May 5 by banks interested in becoming the county depository for all or part of the county's funds.

The bids, which will be opened at noon May 5, should include the rate of interest on daily balances and the number of parts on which the bank desires to bid.

The court plans to divide all public funds of the county, including the county collector's fund, into six equal parts.

Each bid must also be accompanied by a certified check for not less than one and a half per cent of the county revenue for the preceding year, as a guarantee of good faith on the part of the bidder that if the bid is accepted, he will enter into the depository bond required by law.

County Clerk Bob Kielhofner was instructed to send a letter asking for bids to area banks.

The court also discussed the recently enacted countywide sheltered workshop proposal and decided to discuss the matter Thursday with B. W. Gunn, director of Sikeston Community Sheltered Workshop, and other interested citizens.

Voters approved a 10-cent property tax increase per $100 dollar evaluation to finance construction of facilities for a countywide sheltered workshop in the April 1 election.

The court now must appoint a nine-member board of directors to administer the program. State law requires one member of the board to be a licensed physician, one a licensed attorney, one a state training center teacher, one a law enforcement officer, one a social worker and four public members. All will serve without pay.

Also meeting with the Scott County Court Monday were Mississippi County Presiding Judge Ralph Adkisson of Charleston and Associate Judge Lindsay Hurley of Charleston Route One; Louie Hirschowitz of Oran, presiding judge of the Scott County Court, said the courts compared notes on the operations of the two counties.

SUN KEEPS SCHOOL BOTH HOT AND COOL

TIMONIUM, Md. (AP) — This town boasts the first school in the nation that uses solar energy both for heating and cooling.

The Timonium Elementary School, through sponsorship of the National Science Foundation, installed equipment for heat by solar energy in one wing of the school about a year ago. When the experimental system provided surplus energy, a 50-ton, air-conditioning unit powered by water heated by the sun was added. The unit, manufactured by Borg Warner's York Division, is one of the few capable of operating with water at a temperature of only 180 degrees.

Solar collectors atop the building absorb the sun's rays and heat the water which then is circulated through convectors for space heating. For air conditioning, the hot water is directed to the cooling unit to serve as its power supply. By this method the school estimates it saved 1,200 gallons of fuel oil last March, when the system was installed, through May.

The veterinary services division of the Department of Agriculture also says zoos in the country brought in 484 reptiles and 50 rodents over the same period.

Pay hike bill moves to floor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The proposed $4,000 legislative pay hike now moves to the Missouri Senate floor for consideration after winning speedy passage in a Senate panel.

The bill raising annual pay for legislators from $8,400 to $12,400 passed 83-74 in the House a month ago, receiving one more vote than necessary for approval.

The hike would cost taxpayers nearly $900,000 a year.

In other action Monday night, legislative committees considered bills to provide tax relief to the elderly, pay boosts to the blind and increased retirement benefits to teachers.

House Democratic Floor Leader Kenneth Rothman told the Senate Labor and Management Relations Committee that the 47 per cent hike was needed because the cost of living has gone up "dramatically." The proposed 1977 effective date of the hike would be the first raise for legislators since 1967.

Senate President Pro Tem William Cason said the pay hike bill would face rough sledding in the Senate.

But the Clinton Democrat was the only member of the committee absent for the committee vote. The measure passed 6-2, with Sens. A. Clifford Jones, R-Brentwood, and John Ryan, R-Sedalia, voting no.

Ryan suggested that the legislators declare $8,400 a year the poverty level and apply for food stamps.

Rothman said the hike would amount to a 5.8 per cent hike a year since 1967. He noted that with inflation $8,400 in 1967 would only be worth $4,900 in 1977.

Sen. Jones said Rothman should base the rate of increase on the $1,500 legislators received in 1950. He suggested the percentage raise would be much higher than 5.8 per cent a year.

Since 1967, Rothman said the General Assembly has gone from convening once every two years to annual sessions, plus veto and special sessions. He said the number of bills and the state's budget have doubled.

"I don't know anybody who has doubled his workload and gone 10 years without asking for a pay raise," he said.

Though the legislative post is considered a "part-time job," Rothman estimated the legislators work 45 hours a week while the General Assembly is in session. After the session, Rothman said he spends 25 hours a week serving as a "local ombudsman" for his constituents.

The teacher retirement bill would raise their pension pay as well as lower the voluntary retirement age from 65 to 60. Teachers still wouldn't be forced to retire until they are 70.

The tax relief measure, sponsored by Rep. Jim Arnold, D-Waynesville, would allow elderly persons making under $2,000 per year to be exempt from state taxes and reduce the amount of taxes for those who earn above that amount.

It also would raise the maximum tax refund from $400 to $500.

Sen. Jack Gant, D-Indepenence, noted, "We always help the very poor and the very rich," but nobody in between.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee already has approved another elderly tax reform bill introduced by Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton.

That bill, unlike the House-approved measure, exempts Social Security payments from being taxed, but also taxes incomes under $2,000.

The House Social Service and Medicaid Committee considered another bill sponsored by Cason which would boost state blind pension benefits from $110 a month to $120 a month.

SUN KEEPS SCHOOL BOTH HOT AND COOL

TIMONIUM, Md. (AP) — This town boasts the first school in the nation that uses solar energy both for heating and cooling.

The Timonium Elementary School, through sponsorship of the National Science Foundation, installed equipment for heat by solar energy in one wing of the school about a year ago. When the experimental system provided surplus energy, a 50-ton, air-conditioning unit powered by water heated by the sun was added. The unit, manufactured by Borg Warner's York Division, is one of the few capable of operating with water at a temperature of only 180 degrees.

Solar collectors atop the building absorb the sun's rays and heat the water which then is circulated through convectors for space heating. For air conditioning, the hot water is directed to the cooling unit to serve as its power supply. By this method the school estimates it saved 1,200 gallons of fuel oil last March, when the system was installed, through May.

FAUNA IMPORTED

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — South Africa imported 1.3 million tropical fish, 2 million tropical fish eggs, 96,000 birds, 1,600 dogs, 17,000 head of cattle and 3,000 sheep in 1974.

The veterinary services division of the Department of Agriculture also says zoos in the country brought in 484 reptiles and 50 rodents over the same period.

Pay hike bill moves to floor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The proposed $4,000 legislative pay hike now moves to the Missouri Senate floor for consideration after winning speedy passage in a Senate panel.

The bill raising annual pay for legislators from $8,400 to $12,400 passed 83-74 in the House a month ago, receiving one more vote than necessary for approval.

The hike would cost taxpayers nearly $900,000 a year.

In other action Monday night, legislative committees considered bills to provide tax relief to the elderly, pay boosts to the blind and increased retirement benefits to teachers.

House Democratic Floor Leader Kenneth Rothman told the Senate Labor and Management Relations Committee that the 47 per cent hike was needed because the cost of living has gone up "dramatically." The proposed 1977 effective date of the hike would be the first raise for legislators since 1967.

Senate President Pro Tem William Cason said the pay hike bill would face rough sledding in the Senate.

But the Clinton Democrat was the only member of the committee absent for the committee vote. The measure passed 6-2, with Sens. A. Clifford Jones, R-Brentwood, and John Ryan, R-Sedalia, voting no.

Ryan suggested that the legislators declare $8,400 a year the poverty level and apply for food stamps.

Rothman said the hike would amount to a 5.8 per cent hike a year since 1967. He noted that with inflation $8,400 in 1967 would only be worth $4,900 in 1977.

Sen. Jones said Rothman should base the rate of increase on the $1,500 legislators received in 1950. He suggested the percentage raise would be much higher than 5.8 per cent a year.

Since 1967, Rothman said the General Assembly has gone from convening once every two years to annual sessions, plus veto and special sessions. He said the number of bills and the state's budget have doubled.

"I don't know anybody who has doubled his workload and gone 10 years without asking for a pay raise," he said.

Though the legislative post is considered a "part-time job," Rothman estimated the legislators work 45 hours a week while the General Assembly is in session. After the session, Rothman said he spends 25 hours a week serving as a "local ombudsman" for his constituents.

The teacher retirement bill would raise their pension pay as well as lower the voluntary retirement age from 65 to 60. Teachers still wouldn't be forced to retire until they are 70.

The tax relief measure, sponsored by Rep. Jim Arnold, D-Waynesville, would allow elderly persons making under $2,000 per year to be exempt from state taxes and reduce the amount of taxes for those who earn above that amount.

It also would raise the maximum tax refund from $400 to $500.

Sen. Jack Gant, D-Indepenence, noted, "We always help the very poor and the very rich," but nobody in between.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee already has approved another elderly tax reform bill introduced by Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton.

That bill, unlike the House-approved measure, exempts Social Security payments from being taxed, but also taxes incomes under $2,000.

The House Social Service and Medicaid Committee considered another bill sponsored by Cason which would boost state blind pension benefits from $110 a month to $120 a month.

Bernie board okays full-day kindergarten

In other action, the board approved a tentative school budget and teacher salary schedule.

Letters to the Editor

April 4, 1975

Dear Sir,

I read the letter that was written by an unwed mother asking God to send her baby a Daddy and I wrote a poem in memory of our little daughter who was born and died Feb. 8.

Please print it and maybe it will help someone else who has lost a child.

Thank you,
Brenda Wheetley

TELL HER

Dear God I have a favor
I want to ask of you
There's a little girl in Heaven
I want to send a message to,

Please tell her that we love her
More than words could ever tell
Only you know how we miss her
Only you know how we feel

You see, we never got to hold her
She died when she was born
We didn't even get to see her
Or hold her in our arms,

So, Please God, hold her for us
And tell her how we feel,
There's an emptiness inside us
That only she could fill,

I know you're taking care of her
And someday, I believe,
That when I get to Heaven
You'll hand my little girl to me,
Oh God I'll be so happy
Just to hold her in my arms!

So please God tell our baby
That her Mom & Daddy care,
And someday we will join her
We'll all be happy there,

Let our circle be unbroken
Let us all together be
Then again we'll be a family
Once again there will be three

Dear Sir:

In response to the letter written by Mildred Tanksley regarding all the rotten, no good religious people living in East Prairie.

To begin with Mrs. Tanksley should understand there is a vast difference between religion and salvation.

As for only 2 people being concerned about the flood water situation, Mrs. Tanskley is not only mistaken but completely wrong. We had several of our men and teenagers out of church on Easter Sunday helping friends and neighbors move out of the water and sandbagging the levee. We personally known of several people who have given storage space of every conceivable source for furniture storage.

As for the trailer space being rented for over $200 per month the facts are the following, the trailer was rented for the regular rental fee, but these people have to put up a deposit with all the utilities in order for the services to be connected. This along with the first month rent did come to around $200. We homeowners have to put up our depositts also and pay our rent or house payment.

Food was prepared on Easter Sunday and taken down to people who were working on the levee. This was done by more than just the 2 people referred to in Mrs. Tanksley's letter.

Mrs. Tanksley was so quick to quote the Bible. Let me give her a quotation. The Bible says we are not to judge. . It also says we are known by the fruit we bear. Being a fruit inspector, I would suggest ..Mrs. Tanksly prune her fruit tree a little bit in the near future.

We live in East Prairie by choice and not by force and we are proud of our town even with it's faults. We know there are people who will take advantage of a situation like this but then there always have been people who will do just that.

Dear Mr. Blanton,

Have had the enclosed since the '60's, knowing it would become increasingly relevant.

With the passage of the recent tax "rebate" bill its message it most timely and urgent.

I am reminded ofthe scripture in John 8:32 — "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free". It has many truths in it the American people need to know and face up to if we are to survive as a free nation.

Have enjoyed your many good editorials. You have a very good paper.

IF I WERE THE DEVIL . . .

If I were the devil and wanted to turn America into a Communist hell, I think I would do something like this:

I would cultivate among the people the idea that the individual is nothing, the indiscriminate mass of people everything. I would also seek to convince Americans that God and Christian ethics and an honest desire to make one's way in the world are old-fashioned.

I would get elected to office on the promise of helping everybody at someone else's expense.

Then I'd treat the Constitution as a sort of handbook on the philosophy of government to be referred to only if it served my purpose.

I would increase the size and scope of government in every way possible, going into every conceivable busines in competition with established enterprises, paying the State's business losses out of the treasury. I would try to keep hidden how this could lead at the right time to the nationalization ofindustry.

I would thus create a government strong enough to give its citizens everything they want. Thus I could create a government strong enough to take from them everything they have.

By a combination of inflation and taxes I would rob the very people I pretended to help until if they ever should want to return to freedom, they couldn't — but would be dependent on the State.

Next, I would gradually raise taxes to 100 percent of income (we are one-third of the way now) — so that the State could have it all. Then I'd give back to the people enough to keep them alive and little enough to keep them enslaves.

In the meantime I would take from those who have and give to those who want until I killed the incentive of the presently ambitious man and satisfied the meager needs of the rest. The police State would then be required to make everybody work — and the transformation of America from a Republic to a second-rate Communist nation would be complete.

Do you see in this similarities to what we have been doing for thirty years?

Letter to the Editor-
Sikeston Standard

Dear Mr. Blanton,

I feel compelled to try and clear up the misunderstanding some of our friends from the spillway area have about our town of East Prairie and the attitude of our citizens toward their terrible misfortune.

I cannot take credit for doing the little I have done by myself; I had many people as a "back-up" crew, in fact we were all working together, no one person could accomplish anything. The police department called me out of Church Easter Sunday morning and told me people were streaming into town slooking for places to stay and there was simply mass chaos everywhere Members of the Auxiliary Police Dept. and the Sheriff's department and Civil Defense were standing patrol on the highways to try and expedite the evacuation of the people moving their machinery and personal belongings from the spillway. Overnight what had been a threat had become a reality. The winds and torrential rains were going to cause the backwater to cross the highways and cut some people off. They would soon be unable to move over the highways with their vehicles. It was get out for some of the people, that day, or be caught in there surrounded by water they could not cross.

Some of the police department and radio dispatchers came back to City Hall to help out even tho they were off duty. They immediately got on the telephone and we sent out an appeal to the people of East Prairie to call in to City Hall if they had housing or storage space for our people in the spillway. That is what you all are to me, "our people". The radio station KYMO also put on the air our appeal for housing. The churches answered the appeal for sandwiches we realized were needed for the sandbagging crews who were summoned hurriedly by those in charge of operations in the spillwayarea. The sandbagging crews were working a long distance down the levee, about to the New Madrid County line, on weak spots in the levee, far from any food or water (water to drink). Also there were men on patrol and we knew we would have enough food for any of the residents down there we came across that needed it.

The churches came through as we knew they would, with lots and lots of thick, tasty sandwiches and the city provided the coffee and candy bars, etc. By mid afternoon we were on our way down to the spillway in an old van the city uses,which was all we could find on such short notice.. it was slow but we got there and we fed everyone in sight who was hungry. A cofee pot was put on in City Hall and was ready by noon for anyone who came in from work needing hot coffee. No one ever paid for a cup of coffee at City Hall, that incident occurred at another location, one not connected with the governing body of the City.

People were calling in offering housing, storage, by the time we got back from the work area in the spillway those working hard in City Hall to find housing had located some places. It was the assistant Police Chief, the Dog Catcher and myself who went down with the food Sunday; I went because I was the only one familiar with the area enough to find them..the others who did know were busy doing something else.

So very many people helped in all of the efforts of finding housing it would be impossible for me to name them; I would be sure to forget and leave some name out. East Prairie has very little rental housing available and we had to put them in condemned houses and anything we could find.

We kept the chow wagon going down daily with a man volunteering his 4 wheel drive Blazer to transport it in because we were going where they were no roads in places and he could get through the water. He got no pay and I know most of the time he paid for the gasoline put into his truck. We all dug into our pockets to meet the immediate needs.

A "C.B'er" from Anniston relayed messages over the C.B.'s; without him the entire operation down there would not have run quite so smooth for the people and I have heard them all voice their appreciation for his efforts.

On Sunday I asked an off duty policeman to drive over every-street in town to copy down the numbers and street names of empty houses so they could be checked out for availability. We ended up putting some families in public buildings, some city owned, others owned by organizations, with the permission of Mr. Frank Carter, our city manager who also did all he could to assist and the persons responsible for the buildings owned by other organizations, such as the Scout Hut.

I am aware there were some unfortunate happenings, but please don't judge all of our town by a few. In every bushel of apples you are bound to have a few rotton ones . So much has happened since the wind and rains began and so many have lost so much. I hope those who have taken advantage of this situation will try to set things straight.

The river has not yet gone back into its banks and we all have to see this through together, lets try and help each other. What little I have done has been with lots of help and-because I truly wanted to help. I really believe in the Biblical-scripture that says, in effect, "do unto others as you would have them do unto you".

We have made arrangements for more people to be housed if the situation should get worse, we are a little better prepared now. Things just happened so fast I know the people moving out were filled with so much frustration.. the weather, the winds, everything seemed to be against them. It is a pitiful thing to pile your belongings hastily onto a truck and have to travel up to 25 miles or more sometimes with the snow, sleet and rain falling. I can imagine how I would feel to be in a state of uncertainty, not knowing what to do, just trying to outguess the weather and the mighty Mississippi.

The employees, City Council & Civil Defense of East Prairie stand ready to help you in any way we can. I realize some of the incidents I have heard talked about really happened, but please, don't judge an entire town by a few people. Sometimes people confuse the city government with that of a federally subsidized project that is actually administered separately from the city, such as the East Prairie Housing Authority. That housing is operated by a Board of Directors and their director through HUD and the City Council, City Manager and Mayor have absolutely nothing to do with the operation of that housing project, either the Senior Citizens Site or the low rent income section.

It doesn't matter to us what color your skin is or your income or your social standing. We are all human beings and have the same basic needs. We have tried to help all of you the best we could and we are still standing by to help anyone we possibly can help, in any way we can.

I appreciate you allowing me the space to print this letter, Mr. Blanton.

Sincerely,
LaWanda Douglas,
Mayor
City of East Prairie

Ann Landers

Stepchildren need understanding

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for many years and I'm beginning to wonder if you know the difference between a homosexual and a bisexual.

For the record: Gay people have a definite preference for members of their own sex. Bisexuals go both ways but they usually end up with a member of the same sex.

You seem to have a lot of sympathy for the woman who is used as a cover by a guy. But apparently you are unaware of all the gays who are victimized by bisexuals. More switch-hitters return to their wives (or husbands) than stay with their gay companions. Wives and husbands have legal means of coercion, but gays who become involved with married bisexuals have no legal recourse whatever.

Speaking strictly for the gays, I ask you not to confuse us with the bisexuals who can't make up their minds. I agree..it is a rotten thing for a gay to deceive a woman and use her as a cover, but it is equally rotten for a bisexual to deceive a gay or a butch by using him or her as a new kick and then going back to a husband or a wife.--One In Evanston

Dear Ev: That whole scene is like playing tennis without a net. It's too far out and totally incomprehensible to me. I'll take your word for it, and thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am still burning from that letter signed "Another Stepdad With A Pain-In-The Neck Kid."

I was raised by a stepdad who was a wonderful father to me. When I was 15 he died and my mother married again. My second stepdad was the pain in the neck.

Now I have a stepson. Because I know what it's like to have both kinds, I am determined that this boy by my husband's first marriage will never feel rejected. He chose to live with his father and me rather with his natural mother. I couldn't love the boy more if I had given birth to him.

I hope every woman and man with stepchildren under their roof will stop for a moment and try to understand the battles that child is fighting. I know because--I Have Been There

Dear Friend: Thanks for a letter that came straight from the heart. Your husband is lucky to have such an empathetic and compassionate wife. I hope he appreciates you.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been reading your column for two years. I started when I was 12. I have written to you at least ten times but you have never printed any of my letters. All my letters were every bit as interesting as the junky ones I have been reading in the paper lately.

I have decided you are a fake and that you make up the letters yourself. I'll bet you don't even read the ones sent in by the public. If I see this letter in the paper I will die of the shock.--An Unbeliever

Dear Un: Where do I send the flowers?

Sorry if I disappointed you but have you any idea how many letters I receive every day? I can't possibly print even a small percentage. I try my best to select the letters that represent a cross-section of humanity--or the ones others can learn from.

The reason this letter made it is because I received five today from people who had the same complaint.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Lander's guide to "Necking and Petting--What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Women demonstrate for right to decide own fate on abortion

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "Not the church, not the state, women must decide our fate," chanted members of the National Organization for Women outside a Roman Catholic Church in which 35 women favoring abortion were refused Communion.

At the height of Sunday's demonstration at St. Brigid's Catholic church, police estimated there were more than 300 demonstrators on both sides of the abortion issue.

Those opposing abortion supported an order by The Most Rev. Leo Maher, bishop of the San Diego diocese, last week denying Communion to women who belonged to "an organization that promotes abortion."

They shouted "We support Maher," while the NOW demonstrators repeated their chant outside the church.

Linda D'Addario, who led a group of Catholic NOW members into Mass, wore a card saying she was a Catholic who supported NOW's stand that women should have freedom of choice on the abortion issue. She said the women in her group objected to Bishop Maher's letter because, "We believe that people have the right to control our own lives and our own bodies."

When the women approached the Communion rail, said The Rt. Rev. Donald Doxie, "We questioned them about their specific stand on abortion, and if they said they supported NOW's right to freedom of choice, we said that in good conscience we could not give them Communion."

The 35 women wearing NOW buttons were not regular parishioners, said Msgr. Doxie, pastor of St. Brigid's.

There were smaller protests at two other San Diego churches.

TELL HER

Dear God I have a favor
I want to ask of you
There's a little girl in Heaven
I want to send a message to,

Please tell her that we love her
More than words could ever tell
Only you know how we miss her
Only you know how we feel

You see, we never got to hold her
She died when she was born
We didn't even get to see her
Or hold her in our arms,

So, Please God, hold her for us
And tell her how we feel,
There's an emptiness inside us
That only she could fill,

I know you're taking care of her
And someday, I believe,
That when I get to Heaven
You'll hand my little girl to me,
Oh God I'll be so happy
Just to hold her in my arms!

So please God tell our baby
That her Mom & Daddy care,
And someday we will join her
We'll all be happy there,

I realize some of the incidents I have heard talked about really happened, but please, don't judge an entire town by a few people. Sometimes people confuse the city government with that of a federally subsidized project that is actually administered separately from the city, such as the East Prairie Housing Authority. That housing is operated by a Board of Directors and their director through HUD and the City Council, City Manager and Mayor have absolutely nothing to do with the operation of that housing project, either the Senior Citizens Site or the low rent income section.

It doesn't matter to us what color your skin is or your income or your social standing. We are all human beings and have the same basic needs. We have tried to help all of you the best we could and we are still standing by to help anyone we possibly can help, in any way we can.

I appreciate you allowing me the space to print this letter, Mr. Blanton.

Sincerely,
LaWanda Douglas,
Mayor
City of East Prairie

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — As the price of such protein foods as meats and dairy products rises, more and more Americans are turning to enzyme-produced meat substitutes made from protein-rich soy beans to balance their daily diets.

Popular for centuries in the Far East as the base for several foods, soy beans are now being made into sausages and breakfast and luncheon meats for the American market.

Ann Landers

Stepchildren need understanding

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for many years and I'm beginning to wonder if you know the difference between a homosexual and a bisexual.

For the record: Gay people have a definite preference for members of their own sex. Bisexuals go both ways but they usually end up with a member of the same sex.

You seem to have a lot of sympathy for the woman who is used as a cover by a guy. But apparently you are unaware of all the gays who are victimized by bisexuals. More switch-hitters return to their wives (or husbands) than stay with their gay companions. Wives and husbands have legal means of coercion, but gays who become involved with married bisexuals have no legal recourse whatever.

Speaking strictly for the gays, I ask you not to confuse us with the bisexuals who can't make up their minds. I agree..it is a rotten thing for a gay to deceive a woman and use her as a cover, but it is equally rotten for a bisexual to deceive a gay or a butch by using him or her as a new kick and then going back to a husband or a wife.--One In Evanston

Dear Ev: That whole scene is like playing tennis without a net. It's too far out and totally incomprehensible to me. I'll take your word for it, and thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am still burning from that letter signed "Another Stepdad With A Pain-In-The Neck Kid."

I was raised by a stepdad who was a wonderful father to me. When I was 15 he died and my mother married again. My second stepdad was the pain in the neck.

Now I have a stepson. Because I know what it's like to have both kinds, I am determined that this boy by my husband's first marriage will never feel rejected. He chose to live with his father and me rather with his natural mother. I couldn't love the boy more if I had given birth to him.

I hope every woman and man with stepchildren under their roof will stop for a moment and try to understand the battles that child is fighting. I know because--I Have Been There

Dear Friend: Thanks for a letter that came straight from the heart. Your husband is lucky to have such an empathetic and compassionate wife. I hope he appreciates you.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been reading your column for two years. I started when I was 12. I have written to you at least ten times but you have never printed any of my letters. All my letters were every bit as interesting as the junky ones I have been reading in the paper lately.

I have decided you are a fake and that you make up the letters yourself. I'll bet you don't even read the ones sent in by the public. If I see this letter in the paper I will die of the shock.--An Unbeliever

Dear Un: Where do I send the flowers?

Sorry if I disappointed you but have you any idea how many letters I receive every day? I can't possibly print even a small percentage. I try my best to select the letters that represent a cross-section of humanity--or the ones others can learn from.

The reason this letter made it is because I received five today from people who had the same complaint.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Lander's guide to "Necking and Petting--What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Women demonstrate for right to decide own fate on abortion

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "Not the church, not the state, women must decide our fate," chanted members of the National Organization for Women outside a Roman Catholic Church in which 35 women favoring abortion were refused Communion.

At the height of Sunday's demonstration at St. Brigid's Catholic church, police estimated there were more than 300 demonstrators on both sides of the abortion issue.

Those opposing abortion supported an order by The Most Rev. Leo Maher, bishop of the San Diego diocese, last week denying Communion to women who belonged to "an organization that promotes abortion."

They shouted "We support Maher," while the NOW demonstrators repeated their chant outside the church.

Linda D'Addario, who led a group of Catholic NOW members into Mass, wore a card saying she was a Catholic who supported NOW's stand that women should have freedom of choice on the abortion issue. She said the women in her group objected to Bishop Maher's letter because, "We believe that people have the right to control our own lives and our own bodies."

When the women approached the Communion rail, said The Rt. Rev. Donald Doxie, "We questioned them about their specific stand on abortion, and if they said they supported NOW's right to freedom of choice, we said that in good conscience we could not give them Communion."

The 35 women wearing NOW buttons were not regular parishioners, said Msgr. Doxie, pastor of St. Brigid's.

There were smaller protests at two other San Diego churches.

Makeshift garage target of council

MALDEN--This is the second article of a series to inform the residents of Malden of pertinent information contained on the BOCA Codes by the City of Malden.

At no time shall any vehicle of any type undergo major overhaul, including body work, in a busines, commercial or industrial zone, except at an approved automobile establishment. Not more than two currently unregistered and or uninspected motor vehicles shall be permitted on any property in any business, commerical or industrial zone, and at no time shall said vehicle be in any state of major dissassembly, disrepair or shall it be in the process of being stripped or dismantled.

Thus begins the attempt by the City Council to abolish make shift garages by limiting the number of unregistered and-or uninspected autos in a business, commercial or industrial zone. The council rarely conducts a meeting without receiving complaints of autos in a state of disreapair being scattered across a yard or business somewhere in the city. Under the code, repairs to autos must be made in approved automobile establishments.

Zoning enforcement officer Bill Green stated that this does not prohibit an individual or an establishment from making such motor repairs necessary to cause an auto to be moved to a garage.

Again, the City Council has agreed to allow an interim period to permit removal of such autos. A definite amount of time has not been established, but notification of violations or attempts thereof has begun. After such notifications, or attempts thereof, legal actions will be taken against the individual or establishment as required by the code.

Individuals or firms which have more than two such autos may phone Green at 276-3793 or 276-2476 or write him at 1905 Front St. for further explanation of the codes.

Williams, special agent in charge of the Kansas City office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Ground broken for new peach packing facility

MALDEN — Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Missouri Fruit Growers Exchange, Inc., packing and storage facility, were held April 7. The facility will handle the area's peach production and will be located five miles west of Malden on Route WW, atop Crowley's Ridge.

President of the exchange is Carlton Stewart of Campbell, who said he expects the building to be ready to receive peaches by June 15 and completed by Sept. 1.

The facility will contain 45,759 square feet, will have cold storage capabilities in excess of 100,000 bushels, contain a hydro cooling system to cool 1,200 bushels of peaches to 50 degrees as they are brought in from the orchards and a packing line to handle 1,000 bushels per hour. The facility will also contain a 342-bushel refrigeration capacity.

The employment will be approximately 20 persons, which will expand to 100 during the peach season.

Stewart, Mayor Sparrel W. Davis of Malden and other company officials were present for the groundbreaking ceremonies.

What's the law?

The case of the deprived TV viewer

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Frank was a placid individual who was prepared to graciously accept such minor inconveniences as death and taxes. When a contractor started to erect a tall building on the property adjacent to his home, however, which caused interference with his television reception, Frank's philosophical calm was totally shattered.

With more snow accumulating on his TV screen than in the North Pole, he raced off to court demanding that the contractor be ordered not to add another inch in height to his building.

"He's erecting a public nuisance," complained Frank in court. "If the building is allowed to go any higher, it will completely destroy my ability to get a television picture. And, obviously, without television, a home's just not a home."

"While I may be sympathetic to Frank's problem," responded the contractor, "I own the land and there's no law that says I can't put up my building on it. It's a case of electronics versus economics and Frank's problem will have to yield to mine."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Frank to be deprived of his TV picture by the higher construction?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held, if effect, that in the absence of a statute or contract to the contrary, a landowner owns and has the right to use and occupy all space above his property to the extent that there is no interference with air traffic, since airspace is considered tobe a public highway.

Otherwise, concluded the judge, buildings could not be erected, trees could not be planted and even fences could not be run.

BALANCHINE EXPLAINS CHOREOGRAPHERS

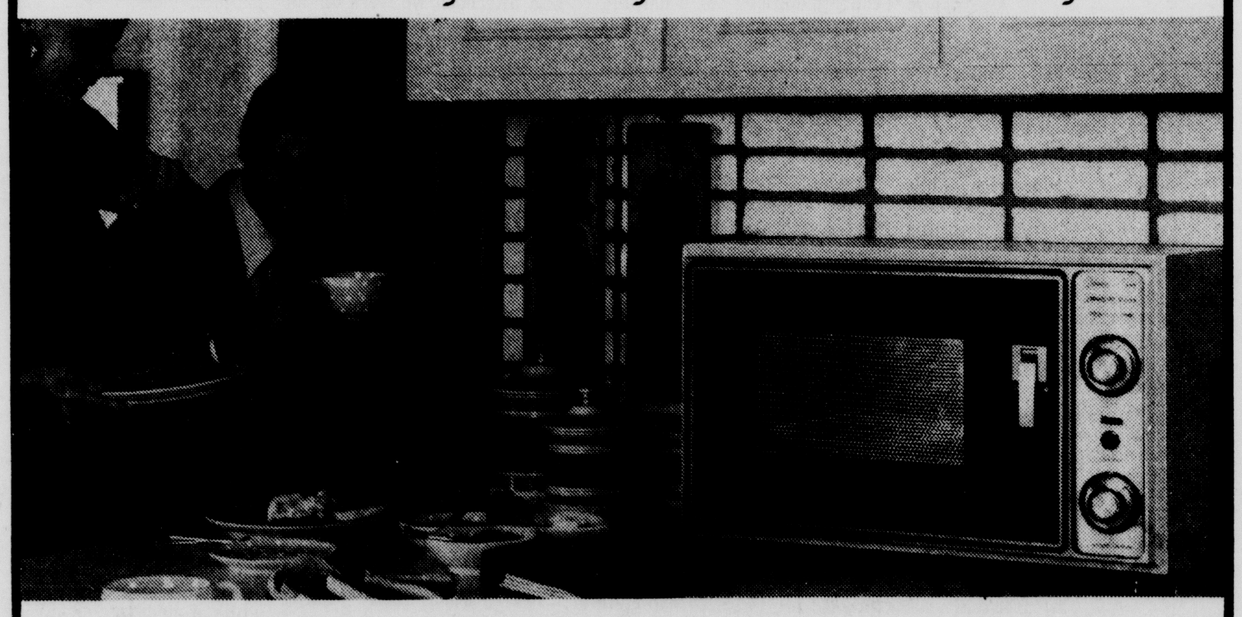

NEW YORK (AP) — Choreographer George Balanchine, in announcing the New York City Ballet's "Ravel Festival" of May 14-31, also discussed choreographers.

"We love music because we live by ear and by eye. We are not brainy people — intellectual. We don't live by words; we don't know what words are; they're not so important. We live by images. We don't know anything about logic; logic to us is a fraud. We live only what we are looking at.

What's the law?

The case of the deprived TV viewer

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Frank was a placid individual who was prepared to graciously accept such minor inconveniences as death and taxes. When a contractor started to erect a tall building on the property adjacent to his home, however, which caused interference with his television reception, Frank's philosophical calm was totally shattered.

With more snow accumulating on his TV screen than in the North Pole, he raced off to court demanding that the contractor be ordered not to add another inch in height to his building.

"He's erecting a public nuisance," complained Frank in court. "If the building is allowed to go any higher, it will completely destroy my ability to get a television picture. And, obviously, without television, a home's just not a home."

"While I may be sympathetic to Frank's problem," responded the contractor, "I own the land and there's no law that says I can't put up my building on it. It's a case of electronics versus economics and Frank's problem will have to yield to mine."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Frank to be deprived of his TV picture by the higher construction?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held, if effect, that in the absence of a statute or contract to the contrary, a landowner owns and has the right to use and occupy all space above his property to the extent that there is no interference with air traffic, since airspace is considered tobe a public highway.

Otherwise, concluded the judge, buildings could not be erected, trees could not be planted and even fences could not be run.

(Based upon a 1972 Illinois Supreme Court Decision.

Kindergarten enrollment is set at Kelly

BALANCHINE EXPLAINS CHOREOGRAPHERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Choreographer George Balanchine, in announcing the New York City Ballet's "Ravel Festival" of May 14-31, also discussed choreographers.

"We love music because we live by ear and by eye. We are not brainy people — intellectual. We don't live by words; we don't know what words are; they're not so important. We live by images. We don't know anything about logic; logic to us is a fraud. We live only what we are looking at.

"I feel that residents of Stoddard County have the right to request the use of the Stoddard County Ambulance service to and from Cape Girardeau hospitals," Smarr told board members. "The people of this county pay taxes for this service and should not be denied the use of their own service. A trip to Cape Girardeau is already partially paid for through payment of taxes."

Stoddard County Prosecuting Attorney Phillip Ayers has been instructed to write a letter to the attorney general to determine what rights the district has under state laws. In the meantime, ambulance drivers have been instructed to proceed as usual with trips to Cape Girardeau.

In other board action, the results of the April 1 election were declared final. New board member Roger Jordan of Essex and John Roach of Puxico, an incumbent who was re-elected, will be sworn in June 9 by Stoddard County Clerk John Marvin Capps.

The ambulance service reported 84 emergency trips in March, with Advance reporting 16 trips; Bernie, 9 trips; Dexter, 46 trips; and Puxico, 12 trips.

seeks forfeiture of office by Simmons.

The first suit, filed by Graham in the name of Carol Bishop of Charleston on April 8, charged Hurley with violating the nepotism section by the hiring or appointment of his son-in-law, Bill Woods, as director of the Mississippi County Abulance Service. Woods assumed the position on Jan. 1. The service had previously been operated under the supervision of Sheriff Simmons.

A portion of the second suit is as follows: At all times herein mentioned, the defendant (Simmons) was duly elected, qualified and acting sheriff of Mississippi County and as such operated, managed and controlled the Mississippi County jail, including the upkeep, food and medical attention for county prisoners and that under the authorization of the County Court was administrator and operator of the Mississippi County Ambulance Service.

The suit further states, that, as sheriff, Simmons is guilty of nepotism in the following respects: (a.) that he hired or caused to be hired his daughter, Jenneth Kellett, also designated as Jenneth Simmons, as bookkeeper of the ambulance service at a salary of $300 per month from Jan. 1, 1974 to Jan. 15, 1975, and (b.) that he has hired, appointed and employed divers times during 1973, 1974 and 1975 to the present time, his son-in-law, Dr. Carter P. Fenton, and the father of his son-in-jail to provide medical attention for prisoners in the county jail, and said charges were paid out of Mississippi County fund bills and statements and warrants prepared and endorsed by the defendant.

In addition, the suit states that Hurley has a special interest in this case because he is a citizen and taxpayer of the county and also a county office holder and is interested in upholding the laws of the state of Missouri as they apply to the office of sheriff and to prevent a "family arrangement" in hiring of county employes.

Brown, a representative from Baum & Co., was in Sikeston earlier this year and was introduced the council as the bond underwriter. He said he just assumed the council knew that the underwriter was the one who bought the bonds.

Judson Palmer, the city's bonding attorney, said the industrial bonds are seldom offered for public bid, unlike regular municipal issues. He said it was his opinion that the bond sale was legal.

Brown told the council that the bonds had to be put on the market by April 25, because the company would be in a new financial reporting period after that date.

In order to issue the bonds after April 25, the company would have to undergo a new audit.

Hurlbut said if the council did not approve the sale of the bonds to Baum & Co., the firm would have problems because the money has been figured into their budget.

Palmer said the bond issue could not be put up for public bid by the April 25 deadline.

Sale of the $1.2 million industrial revenue bonds was approved unanimously. Sale of the $750,000 general obligation bonds was approved by a 3 to 2 margin, with councilmen John Houchin and Eric Piel voting no.

The bank Piel works for was one of the banks wanting to bid on the bonds.

INDUSTRIAL PARK

The council authorized the city to seek a $321,000 grant from the community development fund for a 50-acre industrial park, and housing assistance program.

The program is a revision of the city's request for a $750,000 grant for an industrial park, funding for a new fire station and freezer for Heritage House. That request was rejected by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

HUD officials suggested that the city resubmit the industrial park proposal and attach a housing assistance program designed to bring substandard housing up to standard.

The program includes $250,000 for the park and $20,000 for the program staff, $16,700 for loan subsidies for bringing substandard homes of the poor up to standard and 10 grants of $3,500 each for bringing homes of the elderly up to standard.

POLICE CARS

The council authorized City Manager Charles Church to call for bids on new and smaller police cars.

Church said the present cars are "going down hill rapidly," and the repairs are becoming increasingly expensive.

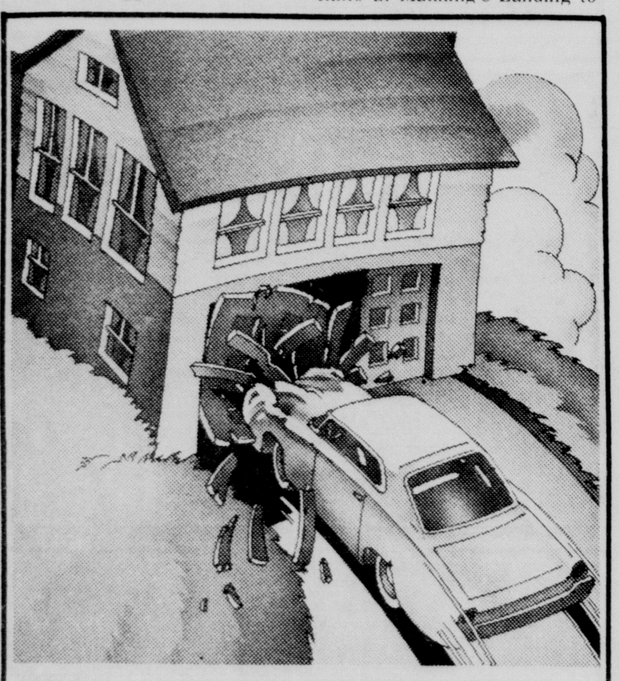

He said he will ask for bids on cars smaller than the full-size vehicles now used. He said the smaller size would mean greater economy for the city.

He added that the police will try to keep the mileage within 40,000 miles each year so the cars can be replaced on an annual 40,000 mile basis. The cars were driven 53,000 miles last year.

TRESPASSING

The council authorized the police department to make trespassing arrests on private property once the department receives a written request from the property owner. The property owner will not have to sign a complaint each time an arrest is made.

The law is primarily needed in areas such as Midtowner Village Shopping Center, where a number of young people often gather in the parking lot.

TRESPASSING

The council authorized the police department to make trespassing arrests on private property once the department receives a written request from the property owner. The property owner will not have to sign a complaint each time an arrest is made.

The law is primarily needed in areas such as Midtowner Village Shopping Center, where a number of young people often gather in the parking lot.

Ray gets university scholarship

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Stan Ray, a 6-foot-9 front-liner at Cape Girardeau Central, will attend the University of Missouri this fall on a basketball scholarship, school officials said today.

Ray averaged 22 points and 19 rebounds per game as a senior and received Missouri Class 4A all-state honors the last two seasons.

Ray was ruled ineligible near the end of his senior year because he had participated in a California summer basketball league. Cape Girardeau Central forfeited its games because of Ray's ineligibility.

CLEVELAND AP-The Cleveland Brown's fifth-round draft choice, Villanova defensive end John Zimba, signed his contract Monday with the National Football League team, a Browns spokesman said. That leaves four draft choices yet to sign agreements with the Browns.

Prize catch

Early season fishing success produced an eight and one half pound bass for Alton Crowley of Sikeston. The prize catch was 24 inches long and was hooked at Lake Tywappity, using a yellow spinner.

Geese look for a home

TRIMBLE — Unless the Giant Canada geese of Trimble Wildlife Area learn to breath under water, like a fish, they'll be out of a home when 8,000-acre Smithville Lake is filled.

The Corps of Engineers lake project north of Kansas City will flood the 1,197-acre Trimble Area where Missouri's resident flock of Giant Canada geese began in 1957.

To compensate Missouri Missouri for the loss of the wildlife area with its extensive marsh developments and public use facilities, the Corps of Engineers, Conservation Department and U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service have studied several sites in north Missouri and the leading candidate is a 4,100-acre area on the Nodaway River north of Fillmore.

The Corps is holding a public hearing April 15 at the Andrew County Courthouse at Savannah to sample public feelings on the proposed site which would be both in Andrew and Holt Counties.

The plan is for the Department of Conservation and the Corps to exchange title of Trimble for whatever area is settled on for the new waterfowl area.

Home-grown geese are a Missouri success story and it all started at Trimble in 1957 when the Conservation Department provided elevated nest structures -- mostly washtubs on posts in the water -- for nesting geese.

It took two years before the first geese nested in the tubs and their young were "imprinted" with the idea of nesting in tubs. Since then, the flock has grown gradually until today there are several thousand Giant Canada geese in Missouri.

The great birds, largest of the several sub-species of Canada geese, grow to as large as 15 pounds or more. They don't migrate and are the only geese which nested extrensively in Missouri in historic times.

At one time, Giant Canada geese were thought extinct. At the time the Conservation Department got the Trimble geese from an old Boone County flock, it didn't know they were Giant Canadas.

They were birds that would nest in Missouri and that was what the Department was interested in. Then, in 1960, Harold Hanson of the Illinois Natural History Survey identified Giant Canadas in a flock at Rochester, Minn. (which still exists).

The Andrew-Holt County area has the most potential for a waterfowl area, according to Conservation Department officials who have looked over the several potential sites.

It has good terrain and potential and is along a natural flyway down the Missouri River.

Smithville Lake is expected to be finished in 1977 making it urgent that a Trimble replacement area be settled on soon.

NEW YORK AP-Gene Chyzowych of Maplewood, N.J. was named assistant head coach of the U.S. Olympic soccer team Monday night.

WFL kickoff expected in August

NEW YORK -AP--Recovering from a disaster is no simple thing, particularly when the disaster was the nightmare which the World Football League became in its infant season.

Somehow, the WFL believes it has recovered, at least enough to try to reach the dreams which were so thoroughly shattered last fall.

The stories about the WFL are incredible, and mostly true. A script writer couldn't have imagined anything much worse.

Against that backdrop and against first-year losses of $20 million and a record amount of lost credibility, the WFL will present itself Wednesday as a league with a future, as one which will play in 1975.

This time, however, the scheme is not so grandiose. The million-dollar contracts and supersalesmanship bandied about last year will be absent. In its place will be a league with a highly conservative and for sports, revolutionary-financial structure.

The financing scheme, and indeed the fact that there will be a league, is a singular tribute to the reorganizing capabilities of Chris Hemmeter, a Hawaiian land developer who became somewhat upset last year when his Honolulu-based WFL lost in excess of $3 million.

That earned the Hawaiians the honor of having lost more in one season than any professional sports team before it, and it brought from Hemmeter a pledge that if there was to be a WFL again, it would be different or it would play without him.

Sources at the WFL meetings which have been in progress since the weekend say the league expects to announce a 10-team league on Wednesday. Helping making that announcement will be such WFL players as Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick, Paul Warfield and Calvin Hill.

Just which cities are to be in the league was not publicly known today, and in fact the league may not know yet. Hemmeter said he remained "quite optimistic that our problem areas will be resolved, though much work remains to be done over the next few days."

What that means is that some cities are not yet firm. Philadelphia, Memphis, Honolilu, Shreveport, La., and Anaheim, Calif., are considered sure bets to be in the WFL . Cities considered likely franchise holders are Chicago, Birmingham, Ala., Jacksonville, Fla., Portland, Ore., and Charlotte, N.C.

All will operate under Hemmeter's financial plan, which requires that each team place in escrowed bank accounts 150 per cent of their anticipated operating expenses for 1975. Additionally, percentages of the team's revenue will be placed in four separate bank accounts, some of them controlled by the league.

It is from these accounts that the league intends to pay player salaries and stadium rents, thus avoiding last year's failures.

And, most players in the league will be guaranteed a $10,000 salary against one per cent of their team's gross revenue, whichever is greater. This will replace the standard professional player salary.

The league will play a 20-game schedule, on weekends, beginning the first weekend in August.

Marshall puts out fire-Reds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "That's when he's at his best," declared Los Angeles Dodger catcher Joe Ferguson after relief pitcher Mike Marshall faced the challenge of Johnny Bench and Tony Perez and eliminated it.

So the Dodgers finally beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-2 in the Los Angeles home baseball opener after bowing in Ohio three straight games.

Elsewhere on a slim major league schedule, the Chicago Cubs downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2, the Philadelphia Phillies edged the New York Mets 4-3, the San Diego Padres shaded the San rancisco Giants 3-1 and the Oakland A's nipped the Kansas City Royals 3-2 in the only American League contest.

The Dodgers- Reds final score was 5-2 and it was the same in the eighth inning when Cincinnati had three men on base, one out and the power-hitting Bench and Perez coming to bat.

Marshall, the Cy Young Award winner as the best National League hurler last season, struck out Bench and, after going 2-2 on Perez, got him to hit into a force play ending the inning.

Ron Cey and Jimmy Wynn blasted homers for the Dodgers off Cincinnati starter Jack Billingham in the first of the four-game series at Los Angeles.

Yet the key to the game had to be Iron Mike Marshall, the reliever who pitched in a record 106 games for the Dodgers last season.

In relief of Doug Rau, he blanked the Reds for 2 2-3 innings.

"It's always a struggle when you face the Reds," Marshall said after the game. "I really had my work cut out for me, but I'm tickled pink whenever I'm out there. There's no greater thrill than to face the best in the world at whatever you're doing."

Cubs 4, Pirates 2

Rick Reuschel, Oscar Zamora and Darold Knowles teamed up ona six-hitter and pitched the Cubs over the previously unbeaten Pirates, who had been the only unbeaten team in the majors. It was the Cubs' fourth straight triumph since their only loss to Pittsburgh on opening day in Chicago.

Jerry Morales staked Reuschel to a 1-0 lead in the second inning when he homered off Bob Moose. The Cubs chased Moose with three runs in a fourth-inning spurt that included four singles plus a double by Steve Swisher.

Phillies 4, Mets 3

Mike Schmidt greeted reliever Jerry Cram with a leadoff home run in the ninth inning, capping a late rally that ruined the major league pitching debut of New York's Randy Tate. Tate breezed into the eighth with a three-hitter and a 3-0 lead. But he walked Larry Bowa with two out, Willie Montanez doubled for one run and Greg Luzinski tied the score with his fourth home run of the young season. Tate left for a pinch hitter in the top of the ninth.

Padres 3 Giants 1

Sonny Siebert pitched five innings of no-hit ball, then turned the mound over to Dave Tomlin and Bill Greif. Siebert limited the Giants to a first-inning walk and retired 14 straight batters before Dave Rader singled leading off the sixth.

Von Joshua and Thomas followed with singles to load the bases with one out but Tomlin came on and got Bobby Murcer to line back to the mound for an inning-ending double play. Bill Greif replaced Tomlin in the seventh and nailed down the victory, giving up only Gary Matthews' ninth-inning home run.

A's 3, Royals 2

Ken Holtzman pitched a six-hitter with last-out help from Rollie Fingers and Ted Kubiak drove in two runs with a double and a single. Kubiak doubled home a run in the second inning and singled in the tiebreaker in the sixth off Paul Splittorff. Kubiak has been subbing for shortstop Bert Campaneris, who suffered a back injury last week.

The A's picked up what proved to be the winning run in the ninth on Phil Garner's single, a stolen base by Allen Hopkins and Claudell Washington's single. That nullified a Kansas City run in the bottom of the ninth.

A's end KC streak

The four-game winning streak of the Kansas City Royals has been broken. The end came Monday night when the Royals bowed 3-2 to the OaklandA's in Kansas City.

The St. Louis Cardinals were idle.

The A's actually won the game in the ninth inning when Phil Garner singled and Don Hopkins, running for Garner, stole second and scored on a single by Claudell Washington.

Oakland broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth. Joe Rudi doubled off starter and loser Paul Splittorff, 0-1, and after walks to Billy Williams and Gene Tenace, Ted Kubiak singled Rudi home.

Hal McRae led off the Royals second with a walk, stole second and raced home when Harmon Killebrew hit a slow roller and was safe at first on third baseman Sal Bando's throwing error.

The Royals erupted for their final run in the last of the ninth, Frank White scoring on George Brett's single. With two out and two runners aboard, Rollie Fingers relieved Ken Holtzman and got pinch hitter Vada Pinson for the final out.

The Royals entertain the A's again tonight, sending Al Fitzmorris, 1-0, against Oakland's rookie Mike Norris, 1-0. St. Louis has another open date.

All-American joke

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Elmer Shotwell could be another Jack Armstrong: the All-American sports hero, well-liked, a natural leader, a top student, president of the Letterman's Club.

But like Armstrong, Shotwell is an imaginary character, although you wouldn't know it if you read one publication's pick of this year's All-American high school basketball players. Shotwell's right there, identified by his coach as a great player and great person.

Phil Miller, basketball coach at Wainwright High School here, invented Shotwell earlier this year to prove that anyone in fact, no one — could be a high school All-American. Miller sent in the legendary Shotwell's statistics to a Cambridge, Mass., firm, "High School All-Americans," that solicits prep players of All-American caliber.

The firm also sends the "All-American" an order form for an $18.95 book it sells, listing the players.

Miller made Shotwell a 6-foot guard who averaged 27 points and 12.8 rebounds a game and led gladden Corner High School to the pinnacle of Hoosier basketball, personally gaining All Wea Creek Conference and Class C All-State honors.

Shotwell was also deemed president of the Gladden Corner Letterman's Club, and cited for v arious other school and civic achievements — all imaginary.

"I got suspicious of this company's offer when they asked me to nominate up to four of my players as high school All-Americans," Miller said. "That sounded kind of weird to me. Nobody has four All-Americans.

"I had an idea it was just one of these deals where they want to sell you a book. My daughter was named on one of these things, the Society of Distinguished American High School Students or something, last year. They just wanted to sell her a book with her name in it."

Sure enough, Miller said he got back a letter from a man who identified himself as editor of "High School All-Americans."

"They said Shotwell had been accepted after a committee had carefully screened his background," Miller said. "They wanted him to buy this book, and they implied it would be sent to all the college recruiters.

"They told him he was one of a select group of less than one per cent of all the nation's athletes to be selected."

Miller said any check would have shown not only Shotwell to be a fake, but also the "Wea Creek Conference" and even "Class C" to be frauds because there are no classes in Indiana prep basketball. Gladden Corner High School existed "about 60 years ago," he said.

"I think the whole thing is funny," Miller said. "But it's too bad, too, because it sort of takes away the meaning from the kids that really deserve recognition. I guess I could have nominated Charley Fastbreak with the same results."

Barnes sued

PROVIDENCE (AP) — A. U. S. Magistrate has ordered Larry Ketvirtis to turn over income tax returns to lawyers for American Basketball Association rookie star Marvin Barnes.

Ketvirtis, a former teammate of Barnes at Providence College, has filed a $1.5 million suit against Barnes, who recently was voted the ABA Rookie of the Year with the Spirits of St. Louis.

Ketvirtis has charged that Barnes assaulted him with a tire iron on the Providence College campus in 1972.

U.S. Magistrate Jacob Hagopian on Monday ordered Ketvirtis to turn over his income tax returns from 1972 to 1974 to Barnes' lawyers.

William H. Curran, a lawyer for Barnes, said the income tax returns were relevant to Ketvirtis' claim for compensatory damages.

WFL kickoff expected in August

NEW YORK -AP--Recovering from a disaster is no simple thing, particularly when the disaster was the nightmare which the World Football League became in its infant season.

Somehow, the WFL believes it has recovered, at least enough to try to reach the dreams which were so thoroughly shattered last fall.

The stories about the WFL are incredible, and mostly true. A script writer couldn't have imagined anything much worse.

Against that backdrop and against first-year losses of $20 million and a record amount of lost credibility, the WFL will present itself Wednesday as a league with a future, as one which will play in 1975.

This time, however, the scheme is not so grandiose. The million-dollar contracts and supersalesmanship bandied about last year will be absent. In its place will be a league with a highly conservative- and for sports, revolutionary-financial structure.

The financing scheme, and indeed the fact that there will be a league, is a singular tribute to the reorganizing capabilities of Chris Hemmeter, a Hawaiian land developer who became somewhat upset last year when his Honolulu-based WFL lost in excess of $3 million.

That earned the Hawaiians the honor of having lost more in one season than any professional sports team before it, and it brought from Hemmeter a pledge that if there was to be a WFL again, it would be different or it would play without him.

Sources at the WFL meetings which have been in progress since the weekend say the league expects to announce a 10-team league on Wednesday. Helping making that announcement will be such WFL players as Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick, Paul Warfield and Calvin Hill.

Just which cities are to be in the league was not publicly known today, and in fact the league may not know yet. Hemmeter said he remained "quite optimistic that our problem areas will be resolved, though much work remains to be done over the next few days."

What that means is that some cities are not yet firm. Philadelphia, Memphis, Honolilu, Shreveport, La., and Anaheim, Calif., are considered sure bets to be in the WFL . Cities considered likely franchise holders are Chicago, Birmingham, Ala., Jacksonville, Fla., Portland, Ore., and Charlotte, N.C.

All will operate under Hemmeter's financial plan, which requires that each team place in escrowed bank accounts 150 per cent of their anticipated operating expenses for 1975. Additionally, percentages of the team's revenue will be placed in four separate bank accounts, some of them controlled by the league.

It is from these accounts that the league intends to pay player salaries and stadium rents, thus avoiding last year's failures.

And, most players in the league will be guaranteed a $10,000 salary against one per cent of their team's gross revenue, whichever is greater. This will replace the standard professional player salary.

The league will play a 20-game schedule, on weekends, beginning the first weekend in August.

Marshall puts out fire-Reds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "That's when he's at his best," declared Los Angeles Dodger catcher Joe Ferguson after relief pitcher Mike Marshall faced the challenge of Johnny Bench and Tony Perez and eliminated it.

So the Dodgers finally beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-2 in the Los Angeles home baseball opener after bowing in Ohio three straight games.

Elsewhere on a slim major league schedule, the Chicago Cubs downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2, the Philadelphia Phillies edged the New York Mets 4-3, the San Diego Padres shaded the San rancisco Giants 3-1 and the Oakland A's nipped the Kansas City Royals 3-2 in the only American League contest.

The Dodgers- Reds final score was 5-2 and it was the same in the eighth inning when Cincinnati had three men on base, one out and the power-hitting Bench and Perez coming to bat.

Marshall, the Cy Young Award winner as the best National League hurler last season, struck out Bench and, after going 2-2 on Perez, got him to hit into a force play ending the inning.

Ron Cey and Jimmy Wynn blasted homers for the Dodgers off Cincinnati starter Jack Billingham in the first of the four-game series at Los Angeles.

Yet the key to the game had to be Iron Mike Marshall, the reliever who pitched in a record 106 games for the Dodgers last season.

In relief of Doug Rau, he blanked the Reds for 2 2-3 innings.

"It's always a struggle when you face the Reds," Marshall said after the game. "I really had my work cut out for me, but I'm tickled pink whenever I'm out there. There's no greater thrill than to face the best in the world at whatever you're doing."

Cubs 4, Pirates 2

Rick Reuschel, Oscar Zamora and Darold Knowles teamed up ona six-hitter and pitched the Cubs over the previously unbeaten Pirates, who had been the only unbeaten team in the majors. It was the Cubs' fourth straight triumph since their only loss to Pittsburgh on opening day in Chicago.

Jerry Morales staked Reuschel to a 1-0 lead in the second inning when he homered off Bob Moose. The Cubs chased Moose with three runs in a fourth-inning spurt that included four singles plus a double by Steve Swisher.

Phillies 4, Mets 3

Mike Schmidt greeted reliever Jerry Cram with a leadoff home run in the ninth inning, capping a late rally that ruined the major league pitching debut of New York's Randy Tate. Tate breezed into the eighth with a three-hitter and a 3-0 lead. But he walked Larry Bowa with two out, Willie Montanez doubled for one run and Greg Luzinski tied the score with his fourth home run of the young season. Tate left for a pinch hitter in the top of the ninth.

Padres 3 Giants 1

Sonny Siebert pitched five innings of no-hit ball, then turned the mound over to Dave Tomlin and Bill Greif. Siebert limited the Giants to a first-inning walk and retired 14 straight batters before Dave Rader singled leading off the sixth.

Von Joshua and Thomas followed with singles to load the bases with one out but Tomlin came on and got Bobby Murcer to line back to the mound for an inning-ending double play. Bill Greif replaced Tomlin in the seventh and nailed down the victory, giving up only Gary Matthews' ninth-inning home run.

A's 3, Royals 2

Ken Holtzman pitched a six-hitter with last-out help from Rollie Fingers and Ted Kubiak drove in two runs with a double and a single. Kubiak doubled home a run in the second inning and singled in the tiebreaker in the sixth off Paul Splittorff. Kubiak has been subbing for shortstop Bert Campaneris, who suffered a back injury last week.

The A's picked up what proved to be the winning run in the ninth on Phil Garner's single, a stolen base by Allen Hopkins and Claudell Washington's single. That nullified a Kansas City run in the bottom of the ninth.

A's end KC streak

The four-game winning streak of the Kansas City Royals has been broken. The end came Monday night when the Royals bowed 3-2 to the OaklandA's in Kansas City.

The St. Louis Cardinals were idle.

The A's actually won the game in the ninth inning when Phil Garner singled and Don Hopkins, running for Garner, stole second and scored on a single by Claudell Washington.

Oakland broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth. Joe Rudi doubled off starter and loser Paul Splittorff, 0-1, and after walks to Billy Williams and Gene Tenace, Ted Kubiak singled Rudi home.

Hal McRae led off the Royals second with a walk, stole second and raced home when Harmon Killebrew hit a slow roller and was safe at first on third baseman Sal Bando's throwing error.

The Royals erupted for their final run in the last of the ninth, Frank White scoring on George Brett's single. With two out and two runners aboard, Rollie Fingers relieved Ken Holtzman and got pinch hitter Vada Pinson for the final out.

The Royals entertain the A's again tonight, sending Al Fitzmorris, 1-0, against Oakland's rookie Mike Norris, 1-0. St. Louis has another open date.

All-American joke

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Elmer Shotwell could be another Jack Armstrong: the All-American sports hero, well-liked, a natural leader, a top student, president of the Letterman's Club.

But like Armstrong, Shotwell is an imaginary character, although you wouldn't know it if you read one publication's pick of this year's All-American high school basketball players. Shotwell's right there, identified by his coach as a great player and great person.

Phil Miller, basketball coach at Wainwright High School here, invented Shotwell earlier this year to prove that anyone in fact, no one — could be a high school All-American. Miller sent in the legendary Shotwell's statistics to a Cambridge, Mass., firm, "High School All-Americans," that solicits prep players of All-American caliber.

The firm also sends the "All-American" an order form for an $18.95 book it sells, listing the players.

Miller made Shotwell a 6-foot guard who averaged 27 points and 12.8 rebounds a game and led gladden Corner High School to the pinnacle of Hoosier basketball, personally gaining All Wea Creek Conference and Class C All-State honors.

Shotwell was also deemed president of the Gladden Corner Letterman's Club, and cited for v arious other school and civic achievements — all imaginary.

"I got suspicious of this company's offer when they asked me to nominate up to four of my players as high school All-Americans," Miller said. "That sounded kind of weird to me. Nobody has four All-Americans.

"I had an idea it was just one of these deals where they want to sell you a book. My daughter was named on one of these things, the Society of Distinguished American High School Students or something, last year. They just wanted to sell her a book with her name in it."

Sure enough, Miller said he got back a letter from a man who identified himself as editor of "High School All-Americans."

"They said Shotwell had been accepted after a committee had carefully screened his background," Miller said. "They wanted him to buy this book, and they implied it would be sent to all the college recruiters.

"They told him he was one of a select group of less than one per cent of all the nation's athletes to be selected."

Miller said any check would have shown not only Shotwell to be a fake, but also the "Wea Creek Conference" and even "Class C" to be frauds because there are no classes in Indiana prep basketball. Gladden Corner High School existed "about 60 years ago," he said.

"I think the whole thing is funny," Miller said. "But it's too bad, too, because it sort of takes away the meaning from the kids that really deserve recognition. I guess I could have nominated Charley Fastbreak with the same results."

Barnes sued

PROVIDENCE (AP) — A. U. S. Magistrate has ordered Larry Ketvirtis to turn over income tax returns to lawyers for American Basketball Association rookie star Marvin Barnes.

Ketvirtis, a former teammate of Barnes at Providence College, has filed a $1.5 million suit against Barnes, who recently was voted the ABA Rookie of the Year with the Spirits of St. Louis.

Ketvirtis has charged that Barnes assaulted him with a tire iron on the Providence College campus in 1972.

U.S. Magistrate Jacob Hagopian on Monday ordered Ketvirtis to turn over his income tax returns from 1972 to 1974 to Barnes' lawyers.

William H. Curran, a lawyer for Barnes, said the income tax returns were relevant to Ketvirtis' claim for compensatory damages.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

THE FAMILY CIRCUS By Bil Keane

"'Gallons' is old-fashioned, Daddy. You should ask for 42.3 liters."

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 15, the 105th day of 1975. There are 260 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1865, President Abraham Lincoln died in a Washington boarding house across the street from Ford's Theater, where he had been shot the night before by John Wilkes Booth.

On this date —

In 1638, English settlers arrived at what is now New Haven, Conn.

In 1850, San Francisco was incorporated as a city.

In 1861, President Lincoln called out militia to suppress the Southern Confederacy.

In 1945, President Franklin Roosevelt was buried at the Roosevelt family home at Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1959, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro arrived in Washington to begin a goodwill tour of the United States.

In 1967, a jury in Chicago found Richard Speck guilty in the slaying of eight student nurses in July, 1966.

Ten years ago: Washington sources said sites near Hanoi were being prepared for surface-to-air protective missiles.

Five years ago: Mobs in Amman, Jordan, burned the U.S. Cultural Center and attacked the U.S. Embassy.

One year ago: A military coup in the West African country of Niger overthrew the government of President Hamani Diori.

Today's birthday: The former president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph, is 86.

Thought for today: A friend is, one might say, a second self — Cicero, Roman statesman, 106-43 B-C.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 15, the 105th day of 1975. There are 260 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1865, President Abraham Lincoln died in a Washington boarding house across the street from Ford's Theater, where he had been shot the night before by John Wilkes Booth.

On this date —

In 1638, English settlers arrived at what is now New Haven, Conn.

In 1850, San Francisco was incorporated as a city.

In 1861, President Lincoln called out militia to suppress the Southern Confederacy.

In 1945, President Franklin Roosevelt was buried at the Roosevelt family home at Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1959, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro arrived in Washington to begin a goodwill tour of the United States.

In 1967, a jury in Chicago found Richard Speck guilty in the slaying of eight student nurses in July, 1966.

Ten years ago: Washington sources said sites near Hanoi were being prepared for surface-to-air protective missiles.

Five years ago: Mobs in Amman, Jordan, burned the U.S. Cultural Center and attacked the U.S. Embassy.

One year ago: A military coup in the West African country of Niger overthrew the government of President Hamani Diori.

Today's birthday: The former president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph, is 86.

Thought for today: A friend is, one might say, a second self — Cicero, Roman statesman, 106-43 B-C.

CARNIVAL by Dick Turner

"That's right, Mr. Whiffler, head down . . . eye on the ball . . . mind off the economy!"
